Senate Demands FCC Give Facts In Wire Seizures

Borah Request Adopted; Sharp Clash Follows on Lobby Inquiry.

Strawn Firm Writ Read by Steiwer

OGPU of U. S. Hinted; Action Necessary, Black Asserts.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate yesterday requested the Federal Communications Commission to explain activities of its agents in connection with "any inspection or alleged seizures' of telegrams and records of telephone messages on behalf of the Senate Lobby Committee, headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama.

Adoption of the resolution introduced by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, was followed by a spirited debate between Black and Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon.

Black's Defense On Air.

"It is absurd," he told the radio audience, "to say that our committee was interested in private telegrams. A loud clamor has been made about private telegrams. Be not deceived. The noise comes because it was thought that all evidence was burned and it is the telegrams that relate to public affair that now frighten the spokesmen of privilege and the highly paid mouthpieces of greed and grab."

From the same radio station last week Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, charged that the Black committee, with the aid of the Communications Commission, had examined every telegram going in and out of Washington for ten months of last year.

Black insisted that the committee had used no telegrams that had not been subpenaed. Directly answering the Libery League charge, he said:

"The Liberty League, which fought the so-called death sentence legislation, now pushes to the front to fight for the death sentence for lobby and propaganda telegrams."

Burning Order Alleged.

Black said that one company had issued orders to its officials in 26 States to burn all records concerning lobbying.

Steiwer in the Senate debate, demanded that the Senate not be a party to formation of an American OGPU. Black replied that seizure of telegrams had been made necessary by destruction of other records bearing on lobbying.

"Resolved, That the Federal Communications Commission be, and the same hereby is, requested to report to the Senate all activities of its agents in any inspection or alleged seizures of telegrams and records and telephone communications, or other private communications, to or from any point in the United States; or investigation of forged or destroyed telegrams; and that the Federal Communications Commission inform the Senate by what authority and under what law and at whose direction the action of the commission was taken."

Court Battle Tomorrow.

Steiwer read to the Senate a subpena served on the Western Union Telegraph Co. asking for all messages charged to the law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, of Chicago, between February 1 and December 1, 1935. This subpena is the basis of an injunction suit against the telegraph company on which argument will be heard in the District Supreme Court tomorrow.

Steiwer said he had been advised other subpenas had been issued by the committee in similar form.

Black replied that part of the expenses of the American Liberty League for telegrams had been charged to the Chicago firm. Ralph M. Shaw, a partner of the firm, is head of the Liberty League in Illinois.

"If we have a right to investigate the Liberty League, which has obtained thousands and thousands of dollars to influence legislation, the Illegal Parking Warrant Issued For Sen. Duffy

Wisconsin Member Denies Knowledge of Ticket Allegedly Put on Auto.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A warrant for arrest of Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, accusing him of violating a District parking regulation, was issued in Police Court yesterday.

"I know nothing about it," said Senator Duffy, when told of the court's action.

"The tag number was 649," said Policeman S. J. Prophet, Eighth Precinct, who ticketed the Congressional car.

This number is listed to Senator Duffy. The warrant charges him with parking in a restricted area along upper Connecticut avenue on February 28. Signs read "No parking 4 to 6 p. m." Policeman Prophet's records show he issued the ticket shortly before 6 p. m.

Duffy Starts Inquiry.

When first word of the warrant reached Senator Duffy, he immediately started an investigation. His secretary was dispatched posthaste to the Eighth Precinct Station. Telephone lines hummed with calls to police and the Senator's home.

An employe of his office hurried to Policeman Prophet's home at 204 Indiana avenue northwest. Prophet was asleep. He is assigned this week to midnight duty. The Senator's representative left a note.

Police were unable to furnish information on the warrant, explaining that Prophet carried all records in his ticket book.

Senator Duffy called the reporter who first told him of the warrant.

"A Mistake Somewhere."

"I have made a complete investigation," he said. "I have called my home. Neither my wife nor my chauffeur know of any ticket or parking violation. I don't drive the car myself. I am sure there has been no ticket issued—at least I have never seen it. I think there must be a mistake somewhere.

"I sent my secretary to the police. They had no records. They knew nothing about the affair. I have questioned everyone who might be connected. I suggest you be careful how you write this incident."

Senator Duffy added that he was on the floor of the Senate the day

Landon Race To Be Guided By Hamilton

Borah, Breckinridge File in Pennsylvania; G.O.P. Seeks $1,000,000.

The increasing tempo of the 1936 political struggle brought numerous developments yesterday, just three months before the Republicans are to open the first of the national conventions.

These activities were outstanding:

A unifying of all the elements driving for selection of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as the Republican Presidential nominee was brought about as John Hamilton resigned from the national headquarters staff of the party here to direct the Landon campaign.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, filed in the Pennsylvania Presidential primaries for the rich prize of 75 delegates to the Republican Convention.

Henry Breckinridge, of New York, also entered the Pennsylvania fight on the final day of filing, to compete with President Roosevelt for the Democratic preference vote.

New Hampshire prepared to hold today the first State-wide election of delegates to the two national conventions.

The Republican National Committee, announcing a surplus of $356,288.94, opened a drive for "a million dollars from a million Americans" to boost its war chest.

It was revealed that Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, all better foes of the New Deal, had conferred together in New York last week, but refused to reveal what was discussed.

Will Not Resign.

Hamilton announced that he will become "national organizer for the voluntary committee" to co-ordinate efforts being made in Landon's behalf. He will not resign as general counsel for the national committee or as national committeeman for Kansas.

In a statement he said that in the nine months he had been on the headquarters staff "I have never worked, nor have I been asked to work for the advancement of the candidacy of any individual."

However, continuing, he pointed out that he is a Kansan and conscious of his "personal allegiance to my Governor." Then he added:

"Believing as I do that Gov. Landon is the man best qualified to be the party's standard bearer in the coming campaign, I am of the opinion that anything I may do in his behalf will be of substantial service to my party. I have come to the conclusion that it is only fair to my convictions to devote my full time and energy to bring about his nomination."

Satisfied With Campaign.

Hamilton told the Associated Press yesterday that in his opinion the campaign for the nomination of Landon "is shaping up splendidly."

"We have reason to believe," he said, "that Mr. Landon will get the support you would expect him to have in the West and in due time we expect the very definite sentiment in the East among the rank and file of the people to be translated into the votes of delegates."

Hamilton said he expected to work out of Washington and to "get around quite a bit." He said he hoped to travel to New England and into various other sections of the country to "talk the situation over" with party leaders.

Headquarters now being maintained in Kansas City by Landon's friends, he said, would be continued. He added he had no plans

House Adopts Leave Bills As Reported

Blanton Charges Sale for $2 of Doctor's Illness Certificates.

The two Government leave bills were ready to be sent to the White House last night after the House had adopted conference reports on roll-call votes.

Only a scattering of opposition developed to the 26-day vacation measure, and only one member voted against the sick-leave bill. Roll calls were demanded, however, by Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, as part of a filibuster against the Ellenbogen rent bill, which followed.

The annual-leave bill report was adopted, 324 to 10; the sick-leave, 335 to 1.

As the measures are retroactive to January 1, 1936, Government employes will be able to take longer vacations this year than they have since the economy act of 1932 reduced a 30-day vacation period to 15 days.

Last Economy Restrictions.

The leave bills wipe out the last restrictive legislation governing Federal workers that was contained in the economy act.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, explained the compromises reached by Senate and House manager and answered questions raised by several members.

"Do you know any private industry that allows its employes to take as much as a 26-day vacation?" Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, asked.

Ramspeck explained that Government employes now are compelled to deduct time from their vacation periods to make business trips uptown, to go to a dentist, and the like. He said that total vacation is about equivalent to that in industry.

Under questioning by Blanton, Ramspeck said that the 90-day accumulative sick leave privilege carried in one of the bills would be retroactive even beyond January 1, 1936, in that employes who had accumulated that much sick leave in the past would be entitled to use it immediately after the measures become laws.

Certificates at $2 Each.

While Blanton was discussing alleged abuses of sick leave privileges Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, interrupted to say that he understood blank certificates, signed by physicians, are available to Government employes.

"Yes, they sell for $2 apiece," said Blanton.

The only member to vote against both conference reports was Representative White (Democrat), of Idaho.

AAA Workers' Bill Reported.

The Senate Agriculture Committee late yesterday reported a bill which, if enacted into law, would have the effect of retaining all AAA employes in Washington and in the field as employes of whatever agency is set up under the soil conservation act recently passed by Congress.

The measure, sponsored by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, would insure retention of about 5,700 AAA employes and recall of 840 furloughed since the AAA act was declared unconstitutional.

Senator Smith said he would call the measure up for a vote at the first opportunity.

30 Hurt in Storm Whipping Miami

Miami, Fla., March 9 (AP).—A freak, 43-mile wind and rain storm that struck Miami tonight injured some 30 persons, flattened a carnival show, damaged many small buildings and blew down electric lines in the northwest and southwest sections.

It apparently was an offshoot of a winter storm of moderate intensity reported moving northeastward through the Gulf of Mexico.

The United States Weather Bureau reported last night that a storm disturbance, located over central Florida, probably will move northeastward. Storm warnings were posted from Cape Hatteras to the Virginia Capes. Southeast to East winds were increasing in intensity, the bureau stated. They were expected to be accompanied by rain today.

Air Gas Raid Warnings To Be Tested in London

London, March 9 (AP).—Tests are to be conducted tomorrow in Herndon, London suburb, to discover the best means of warning the public in each community in the event of a gas attack from the air.

Sirens will be sounded from a police station, while observers, equipped with sound-recording instruments, will record the power and penetration of the various siren notes.

The tests will be one of the initial steps in the new program of civilian preparedness for air raids, supplementing Britain's rearmament program.

Britain Warns Hitler On War, Offers to Study Security Pact; Paris Sees Overture as Blow

Treaty Scrapping Not Held Hostile

Aid Pledged to French, Belgians if Attacked; Defense Urged.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 9.—Great Britain linked a plain warning to Adolf Hitler not to make war today with an agreement to examine his security proposals following the scrapping of the Locarno Treaty.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, in a pronouncement to the House of Commons shortly before he entrained for Paris, said Great Britain is honor-bound to march to the assistance of France and Belgium if Germany should attack them.

There is no reason to suppose the German action threatened war, he said, however, and he pledged that Great Britain would make the best of an admittedly serious situation by trying to rebuild Europe's shaken peace structure.

Eden's failure to mention sanctions or any other possible punishment of Germany was considered significant in diplomatic quarters. They interpreted his speech as definitely conciliatory and as indicating that Britain is not prepared to take any strong measures against Germany on the basis of the present situation.

Baldwin Decries Suspicions.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, following Eden in the packed house, said peace in Europe is impossible so long as Franco-German suspicion continues. He pledged that Britain would bend her energies toward greater co-operation in the hope of achieving a tripartite friendship.

If European nations want to stop aggression, Baldwin warned, however, they must "be much more ready for war than they are today, otherwise the aggressor will have his own way."

Eden strongly criticized Adolf Hitler's action in tearing up the Locarno treaty and said no one in this country would condone the step.

Despite this, Germany was promised a fair hearing on her peace proposals, of which Eden said the most important was an unconditional promise to return to the League of Nations.

Eden was noncommital on details for the future, but refused to see the situation as desperate. His reference to Britain's manifest duty to rebuild shattered peace foundations in Western Europe were studied carefully by diplomats, who took it as a possible hint that Britain will not insist on a re-establishment of the present Locarno agreement.

Carried Cabinet Weight.

His speech carried the full weight of the Cabinet, following week-end consideration of the action, and was a carefully studied declaration of policy.

Mincing no words, the young foreign minister warned Hitler that he must not cross the French or Belgian frontiers unless he is prepared to fight Britain also.

"Britain would regard themselves in honor bound to come in a manner provided in the treaty (Locarno) to the assistance of a country attacked," Eden stated during a hushed silence in Commons.

Baldwin, leading off the rearmament debate, drew cheers when he refused to place the whole blame for European unrest upon Germany. He said blame also lay with the French.

The prime minister appeared dejected and weary as he referred to the centuries-long havoc caused in Europe because of Franco-German suspicions and admitted the prospects of bringing the countries together again appeared less today than at any time since the war.

"The only hope lies in achieving a tripartite friendship," he said, asking for strong armaments in order to gain respect for Britain's "fight for peace."

Vote of Censure Asked.

Maj. Clement Attlee, Labor Party leader, moved a vote of censure against the government.

In connection with the German developments, he said, Great Britain has shown "a widespread disregard for treaties." He cited the Anglo-German naval treaty which Britain signed despite Germany's violation of the Treaty of Versailles.

Sisson Scores Jenckes' Stand On Rider Issue

School Board's Accuser Is Attacked for Second Refusal to Testify.

Hearings on the Sisson bill to repeal the "anti-red" rider that forbids mention of Communism in local schools were closed yesterday with a scathing attack by Representative Fred J. Sisson, author of the bill, upon Representative Virginia E. Jenckes for refusing for a second time to be cross-examined on her blanket accusations against the Board of Education.

Reiterating the charges of "inefficiency" and "neglect of duty" which she made last Monday before the sub-committee on education of the House District Committee, Mrs. Jenckes further accused the board members yesterday of "bigotry and religious intolerance."

As proof of her charges she cited the board's opposition to the sale of the old Tenley School to the Sisters of St. Ann's School in 1933 and the 286 pages of "red rider" testimony collected by the Blanton sub-committee on appropriations at its executive hearings on the pending supply bill.

Religious Angle Scored.

The injection of the religious issue into the red rider debate was vigorously assailed both by Representative Sisson and members of the Board of Education. Amplifying Mrs. Jenckes's version of the Tenley School matter, Henry I. Quinn, a board member, pointed out that he had been largely responsible for the original leasing of the Tenley School to the St. Ann's Sisters and that "being a Catholic I could hardly be accused of religious bigotry for voting against the sale of the building at a later period."

The school board's refusal to agree to the sale of the Tenley School to the St. Ann's Sisters, Quigley explained, was prompted by reduced appropriations for school buildings and the fear that the old school might have to be used again to care for the increased pupil enrollment.

In summing up the points that had been brought forward in favor of his bill at the three days of hearings, Representative Sisson thanked the members of the sub-committee for their "impartiality and fairness."

"When I say committee, I mean four members," the Congressman continued. "I exclude Mrs. Jenckes. She prejudged the case. She has

France Fears Stand Weakened By Britain's Desire for Parley

'Impossible For Paris to Talk Directly to Berlin,' Say Leaders; Six Nations Pledge Support For Protest to League on Treaty Breach.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 9.—France, with pledges of support for her protest against German re-occupation of the Rhine zone, saw her position weakened tonight by an apparent British desire to negotiate a new European peace treaty.

Publicly, the Government asked its military allies how far they will go to punish Adolf Hitler's violation of the Locarno pact.

Six nations—Poland, Russia, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—came forward with pledges of support for the French protest to the League of Nations.

Privately, French officials declared that the speech in the House of Commons by Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, left possible only a "platonic" condemnation of the Reich at Geneva.

Officials expressed themselves as convinced that Great Britain must be the intermediary in any discussion between France and Germany over the Reich's denunciation of the mutual security treaty.

Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin canvassed every possibility of action which would enable Great Britain to become the mediator. While the government stands by its refusal to negotiate as long as German troops are in the Rhineland, officials said in the event of a "miracle" evacuation of the re-occupied zone France would insist that any discussion be held within the framework of the League.

The government would demand, officials added, that any Franco German pact be guaranteed by a third power, presumably Great Britain.

The flat refusal of Premier Albert Sarraut to consider offers of new treaties, they said, makes it "impossible" for Paris to talk directly to Berlin and at the same time "save its face."

Informed sources saw in the support of France's military allies a strengthening of the "ring of steel around Germany."

Ambassador Vladimir Potemkin of Russia assured the government that the Soviet was definitely on the side of France in demanding German evacuation of the Rhineland.

Similarly, Dr. Alfred Chlapowski, the Polish Ambassador to Paris, told Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, that his country intends to remain faithful to its obligations under the Franco-Polish alliance.

French Planes Chase Invading German Flier

Nazi Flew Over Fortress; Troops Throng Border; People Await War.

By the Associated Press.

Metz, France, March 9.—France poured men and materials into her Rhineland fortifications tonight amid a flurry of excitement over a report that a German plane had flown over the French fortress at Thionville.

Authorities at Metz were notified the plane sped back to Germany when French military planes aook to the air in pursuit.

Alsatians, with the fatalism of frontier populations, watched the French reinforce the border with the comment: "It will not be long now."

Both sides of the Rhine near the international bridge were thronged with citizens of France's Strasbourg and Germany's Kehl watching the opposite side of the river.

Police Guard Banks.

Savings bank depositors hurried to banks to withdraw money. More than 5,000,000 francs was reported taken out at Strasbourg. Police were called out to keep the lines of depositors orderly. Withdrawals were limited at Mulhouse.

With war-time discipline, the French requisitioned trucks at Strasbourg and elsewhere to rush two regiments to Bitche, while at Forbach, near the Saar, the army commandeered taxis, trucks and even farm horses to speed up the movement.

Gen. Pierre Hering, military governor of Strasbourg, received no orders for further reinforcements, and asserted: "The fortifications are already jammed."

Although the civil population apparently was quiet, banking officials were alarmed by the rush on government savings banks by nervous Alsatians.

One typical comment was: "We know the Boches. They are not bluffing. One month, six months, a year—but then war—but this time they will find us ready."

The town of Kehl, on the German side of the Rhineland, was quiet. In cafes there Nazis confined their comment to, "Not yet. Der Fuehrer is not ready."

French airplanes flew over Strasbourg throughout the day. Travelers on trains betwene Metz and Strasbourg passed troops wearing the berets of Alpine regiments marching north behind units of light artillery.

Two battalions of infantry garrisoned at Remiremont, 50 miles

Attorneys for Edith Maxwell Assail Verdict, Ask Error Writ

The conviction of Edith Maxwell, young Wise, Va., school teacher, for the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell, was not supported by the evidence, the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals was told in Richmond yesterday.

Alfred A Skeen, one of the three attorneys for the girl, asked the high court to issue a writ of error in the case. If this is granted, the case will go on the docket and the attorneys will appeal for a reversal of the original verdict and a new trial in June.

If the writ of error is not granted, the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Appeals is lost.

Attorney Skeen was supported in his arguments by M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, and Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria. The latter was retained by The Washington Post, whose subscribers raised a defense fund for Miss Maxwell, who faces a sentence of 25 years in prison.

The petition, which the court is not expected to act on for several days, set forth ten errors in the school teacher's trial at Wise.

The two that were stressed, however, were insufficiency of evidence and improper instructions to the jury.

Attorney Skeen, outlining the background of the case, recalled that Trigg Maxwell threatened to whip Edith, seized her by the hair and threw her to the floor. In the struggle, he said, Edith felt a loose slipper under her back, "struck out with it until she became freed from her father's grip, and ran, practically unclad, from the house."

The prosecution at Wise, Skeen emphasized, did not show beyond a reasonable doubt that this slipper blow was the cause of death.

"This contention," he added, "is supported by affidavits from three doctors, based on autopsy reports, that the girl's father did not die as the result of blows on his head."

Attorney Skeen said that the Circuit Court in Wise should have instructed the jury as to second-degree murder and manslaughter, as well as first-degree murder. To convict for murder in the first-degree, he said, it must be shown that the defendant actually intended to kill.

Waving the slipper aloft, Attorney Skeen said:

"This girl said she was afraid she had hurt him with this. And if there had been any intention to commit murder, she would not have merely cut a three-quarter inch gash in the scalp and caused two slight bruises."

Girl, 18, Kills Herself at Party; Police Told of Lovers' Quarrel

Miss Trathen, who roomed in an apartment at 1418 W street northwest, had just engaged in a telephone conversation with her "boy friend," police were told.

This conversation, they were told further, seemed to depress her.

She was melancholy as the dinner started. Between the soup course and the filet mignon, she excused herself from the table and went to the bedroom on the floor above.

A minute or so later, Livingston and the guests heard a shot fired. In the bedroom they found the young girl lying on the floor, a wound in her abdomen and a .38-caliber revolver in her hand.

Police and the Emergency Hospital were notified. When the police arrived and found the ambulance was not there, they summoned Dr. R. R. Stevenson, of 1644 Columbia road northwest. The girl at that time was still breathing.

He pronounced the girl dead at 7:10 p. m.

Coroner A. Magruder McDonald said it was apparently a case of suicide. Nevertheless he decided to perform an autopsy this morning.

Those in the Livingston house at the time of the tragedy told police they were Eleanor Shearer and Anne Portell, roommates of Miss Trathen; Ernest Hammersla, described as a traveling man, and

Experts to Map Exemptions on Corporate Tax

'Cushion' Proposal Fought by New Deal; G. O. P. Assails New Levy.

By Robert C. Albright.

Confronted with a growing demand for small corporate exemptions from the President's $620,000,000 corporation earnings tax, Treasury experts agreed yesterday to draft new tax brackets as a basis for compromise, but made clear that the Administration is opposed to any such "cushion" arrangement.

Ways and Means Democrats called a late afternoon conference, but reached no formal agreement, despite insistence by Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, that the heavy new rates be moderated as applied to the small businessman. It was understood, however, that a majority of the group favored moderation along the Vinson line.

Members admitted freely that the tax program had encountered its first serious obstacle, but predicted an early solution. The Treasury this morning will submit new schedules of rates on corporation taxes, with levies graduated according to percentage of earnings, rather than the former proposal for taxes graded on fixed income brackets, it was learned.

Republicans on the Hill tax subcommittee meanwhile opened a new offensive on the entire principle of the corporation earnings tax. Representative Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), Michigan, charged Administration revenue estimates are excessive, and declared there is likelihood that even less will be realized on the plan than under the present corporate income tax.

Investor Flight Seen.

Woodruff said large investors will turn to tax-exempt State and municipal securities for protection, neglecting the industrial market. Citing the example of an investor drawing $500,000 in dividend income, he estimated such a person wold realize just as much from investment in 3½ per cent, tax-free securities, without risk, as he would from a 9 per cent industrial enterprise.

Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the sub-committee, replied that the tax-exempt securities market is limited, and its investment opportunities already have been taken full advantage of.

As sub-committee tax studies went forward, Treasury experts laid figures before the sub-committee purporting to show that 191,302 persons would pay additional income taxes as a result of the President's plan to reach both undistributed corporate earnings, and income paid out in dividends.

126 'New' Millionaires.

Assuming that all corporate dividends were distributed under the new plan, the experts said the number of persons in the millionaire bracket would be increased from 86 to 212, and this group alone would receive $607,000,000 in income.

Treasury experts told the subcommittee that a total of 16,051,762 persons earning over $1,000 would receive an aggregate of $40,585,000,000 in income in 1936. Of these, they estimated that 13,172,698 would pay no taxes.

If all corporate earnings were distributed, it was estimated that the President's program would add $4,015,000,000 to the $14,161,000,000 of net income in 1936 which would be subject to a Federal tax.

The large number of corporations in the lower earnings class, which would materially benefit from the tax "cushion" proposed by Vinson, were shown in another table prepared by the Treasury, showing that 257,586 concerns will share in the $8,308,000,000 estimated corporate earnings for 1936. Of these, it was estimated that 76,925 corporations will earn less than $1,000, and 42,799 between $1,000 and $2,000. The original Treasury brackets would tax this group as high as 25 per cent, which spokesmen for small business interests contend would force many of them out of existence.

Contends for "Bulwark."

By imposing a lower rate of taxes on the small-income corporations than is provided in the present law, and grading it gradually upward in such a manner as to permit corporations to cover an adequate percentage of undistributed dividends into reserves each year, Vinson contends that a necessary bulwark can be erected against future emergencies—one that is not provided in the Administration's plan.

In this connection, the Hill subcommittee yesterday discussed the plan first advanced by former Senator Andrius Jones, of New Mexico, in 1921, from which the President's proposal is said to have originated. To a large extent, this bears out the Vinson principle, and in a general way its lines may be followed in the new bracket submitted today by the Treasury.

8 per cent on the first 10 per cent of earnings.

16 per cent on the second 10 per cent.

24 per cent on the third 10 per cent.

32 per cent on the fourth 10 per cent.

40 per cent on the fifth 10 per cent.

48 per cent on the sixth 10 per cent.

Reserves Opinion.

Following yesterday's conference of Ways and Means Committee Democrats, Chairman Hill said he is reserving any opinion on the so-called tax "cushion" proposals until after he sees the new Treasury brackets worked out on that principle.

Raymond Moley, former close adviser to the President, one-time Undersecretary of State, and now editor of Today, in an article in his magazine last night said that "Fortunately there are already signs that Congress will not blindly follow the line laid down by the White House and the Treasury."

Referring to the proposed graded corporation earnings tax, Moley said the plan "to prevent the accumulation of surpluses by a prohibitive tax of about 33 1-3 per cent" is like "levying a prohibitive tax upon individual life insurance premiums. Surpluses are the life insurance policies of business firms."

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

RESIGNATION of John Hamilton from the headquarters staff of the Republican National Committee means a more aggressive campaign on behalf of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the party's Presidential nomination. Mr. Hamilton will devote his time until the Cleveland convention in June visiting around the country and directing political strategy in the Kansan's interest.

Should Gov. Landon be nominated, Mr. Hamilton, a pleasant, able, red-haired newcomer to national politics in his early 40s, will undoubtedly be the Kansan's campaign manager and the next chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Should Gov. Landon be elected, then Mr. Hamilton would—but the latter is too realistic to spend any time dreaming about what he is going to be a year from now. But keep your eye on John Hamilton—for he is destined to go far, this year or a little later on.

His decision to leave the national committee headquarters to devote all his time to the Landon candidacy concentrates attention on the progress made by the Kansas Governor with so little effort and without any organization. Gov. Landon today stands in the front of Republican Presidential possibilities—yet not a cent has been spent by him or any of his close friends in organizing any State. Indeed, the Landon camp does not even have a headquarters in Washington or elsewhere outside of Kansas—and there it is an informal headquarters.

* * * *

Nor is it planned, now that Mr. Hamilton has become what he terms "national organizer" for the Landon forces, to engage in any spending spree or to enter any State primary fights. If such a thing is possible in politics—the honor in this case seems to be seeking the man, instead of the man the honor.

Gov. Landon has not made any speaking tour of the country—indeed, despite a deluge of invitations to speak outside of his State, he has made only two such appearances and has none scheduled. He has no publicity staff. When he does speak there is no general distribution of his remarks in advance. Copies of his recent speech at Lincoln, Nebr., were sent out only when requested. The only effort made in his behalf has come from a small group of friends who have heralded his personality and ability wherever they have gone.

Yet Gov. Landon, as far as such things can be ascertained through straw votes and polls, today is the favorite for the Republican Presidential nomination of more members of his party than any other man. There has been a steady trek of Republican leaders of all shades of opinion and from all parts of the country to his State capitol. As much has been written in the daily press about him—and as favorable—as about any of the Republican aspirants.

Why all this interest in Gov. Landon? Why all this sentiment for him? Perhaps the reason is that the Kansan stands for something in which the country is interested, of which it approves and wants. One fact about him stands out—he is a budget balancer, he believes in economy in government, he is an advocate of caution and sanity in fiscal matters. Several years ago Calvin Coolidge was made an object of ridicule for possessing such attributes. But the pendulum has swung the other way. The country has become tired of profligate spending, it has become groggy from reading daily of expenditures in astronomical figures and it has become apprehensive over future taxation, if not of fiscal taxation.

If President Roosevelt possesses the political intuition with which he is credited, if he has the ability to sense popular reaction, he will seek drastic means of curtailing expenditures to appease resentment growing out of New Deal spending — perhaps more deeply felt this week as income tax returns are prepared than previously. It is the issue on which he will be beaten—if he is.

* * * *

Nothing is more pleasing to those who wish Gov. Landon well than the Republican situation in Illinois. There Senator William E. Borah has challenged Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, for the State's delegation to the Cleveland convention. The Landon backers feel that the Kansan cannot lose by the outcome.

If Col. Knox, who abandoned mountain lion hunting yesterday to start hunting for some votes in the Southwest, wins in Illinois—and some observers think he will—it will be a sharp set-back to the Borah candidacy, thus weakening the Idahoan's prestige in other States where he is now a favorite along with Gov. Landon.

Should Senator Borah win, it would mean the end of Col. Knox. Party leaders would quickly conclude that a man who was not the choice of Republicans in his home State, where he publishes an influential newspaper, could hardly be a threat to President Roosevelt in November. But in the event Senator Borah wins, something else will happen. The conservative Republicans who dislike the Idahoan would be forced to center their support on a "stop Borah" candidate and in all probability they would turn to the man who has shown the greatest strength—Gov. Landon.

Wire Seizure Data Demand

Senate will see why we have called for these particular telegrams," Black said.

Form of Subpena Target.

Steiwer said he was not discussing precise telegrams, but the form of the subpena which asked for all mesages of the law firm. He said he knew of no case in which the Supreme Court had upheld the subpenaing of all papers regardless of their subject matter and their bearing on the case.

"With very limited exceptions, the Houses of Congress have not employed the dragnet subpena, but have followed the practices of the courts," he said.

"I do most earnestly call attention to the fact that there is in a procedure of this kind much of evil consequence.

"The Fourth Amendment is a constitutional right which the courts not only may enforce but it is their duty to enforce."

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, expressed the opinion there was a difference between constitutional rights in a legislative inquiry and a court case, the latter being narrower in its subject matter.

"Ultimately this will be in the courts," Steiwer retorted.

Minton said he doubted the right of the courts to question the sufficiency of a Senate subpena.

"Under this subpena, you would include telegrams to wives, to sweethearts, to law partners, to business associates, telegrams about business transactions that have not been completed," Steiwer said. "That procedure is denounced not only by the courts, but it is denounced by fairness and equity."

Referring to a wire-tapping case, Steiwer said the principle was essentially the same.

He quoted the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes as having written in an opinion:

"It is less evil that some criminal should escape than that the Government should play an ignoble part."

Replying to Minton's suggestion about the difference between a court and a legislative procedure, Steiwer said that witnesses in a legislative investigation did not have the protection of a judge and jury.

"I have heard it over and over again that the bill of rights stands secure," he said. "For the first time now we see a threat to a citizen's protection under the bill of rights. There can be no justification for it."

Steiwer said that he had heard the charge that inquiries had been made into the affairs of Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson Cabinet, and that "his moral crime was not that of lobbying but his offense was that he was identified with the Liberty League."

Humiliation's Shadow.

"We do not want to be humiliated," he said, "by having someone assert the claim that we looked into the affairs of Bainbridge Colby because he was an enemy of the Administration, and that we did not look into the affairs of others because they are friends of the Administration."

Steiwer said he had been told that James A. Farley had lobbied on the holding company bill but that the committee "had refrained from asking the telegraph companies to furnish Mr. Farley's telegrams."

"I do not know of any reason why his telegrams should be furnished here, but I do know that it is an unwholesome atmosphere in this body when the people on the outside are saying of us things of the sort that I heard and now relate," he continued.

"I hope there never in our free country will be a political surveillance of the private affairs of the American people. I hope the guarantees of the Fourth Amendment will always be unimpaired, and if there is to be an OGPU here, if there is to be organized surveillance of the privacy of the people of America, I do not want the Senate or any committee of the Senate to have anything to do with it."

Black pointed out that Steiwer did not make charges on his own authority, but was repeating what he had heard:

"He wants an investigating committee—vain and illusory hope—to conduct its activities in such a manner that there will be no criticism from any source," Black continued. "He wants the man who is under investigation to come to the Senate committee and review its actions, rose-tinted and sweet, so gentle and so kind that no citizen of the United States will make any criticism of what the committee does. Wonderful hope! Beautiful vision!

"Mr. President, your committee has not, and there is no single member of the committee who would tolerate any departure from the real honest tradition and the real honest constitutional safeguards of the humblest citizen of the Nation, but that is not the cause of this complaint.

"Look behind the smoke screen. The fear is that this committee has failed properly to recognize and approach with awe the sacred throne upon which sit the financial rulers of the nation who have sought through their paid lobbyists and propagandists to direct the legislation of the country so that the weak should bear the tax burden of the Nation and in order that those who have the most and who are able to bear its burdens can continue to escape as they hope to do if they can bring improper discredit upon the legislative committees.

"They are not worried about the humble citizen. It is only when we approach the citadel of the great, when we get near the sanctum sanctorum of power, or position, of privilege. It is then that they begin to talk about constitutional rights and attempt to wrap themselves in the Constitution when they are the very people who, by their pillaging and plundering of the people of the Nation, have almost brought the nation to the verge of chaos, destruction and ruin."

Seized Alcohol Taxable, Rules Supreme Court

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court handed down only one opinion yesterday, as lawyers prepared for arguments today in the first of two New Deal cases to be heard this week.

Briefs upholding and challenging the constitutionality of the 1933 securities and Guffey coal control laws, involved in the cases, were filed with the court.

In its lone opinion the tribunal ruled that the Government could collect taxes on 146,157 gallons of alcohol claimed by Frank Rizzo. The spirits were seized by customs and Coast Guard officers on an oil barge at Port Bayonne, N. J.

To Hear Cutten Case.

Other actions made public yesterday included:

1. The court agreed to decide whether Arthur W. Cutten, widely known Chicago grain trader, should be barred from the Nation's markets for two years for alleged violation of the grain futures act.

2. It declined to review a temporary injunction granted by a lower court restraining Louisiana from seizing a Texas Oil Co. property in that State for back taxes. The injunction thus stands.

3. It directed New Mexico to file an answer within 20 days to suit brought by Texas for the termination of water rights in the Rio Grande River.

Defers Sugar Ruling.

The court deferred until next Monday, at least, announcing its decision in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Sugar Institute, a case involving price-fixing.

The right of Congress to compel registration of securities under the 1933 law was defended in a brief presented by Solicitor General Stanley Reed, who will argue orally for the Securities Commission today before the justices.

The law was challenged by J. Edward Jones, New York stock broker, who sought to withdraw $100,000 of oil participation trust certificates from registration after the commission had questioned some of the statements in his application.

James M. Beck, former Republican Solicitor General, and Harry O. Glasser, of Enid, Okla., will appear for Jones. Bainbrodge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, also is one of Jones' lawyers.

Polish Senate Warned Against Hitler's Plan

Warsaw, March 9 (A.P.).—The state senate today was warned that Poland could not rely too much on the German-Polish nonaggression treaty.

"The Germans want to anesthetize us with the pact," a senator from Poznan declared, "but simultaneously their actions such as the recently discovered scret Hitlerite organization seeking to detach Polish Silesia from Poland should make us most watchful."

The spokesman for the German minority protested that the actions of a small group do not represent the ideas of all Germans living in Poland.

22 Students in Court In College 'Bomb' Hoax

Syracuse, N. Y., March 9 (A.P.).—The making and mailing of a hoax bomb addressed to Chancellor Charles W. Flint, of Syracuse University, and found in the postoffice Saturday, brought 22 students of the university into police court today on charges of disorderly conduct. Each pleaded innocent and was paroled until Saturday. Three others were to appear later.

Gone were the smiles the students wore Sunday when they trooped to police headquarters to explain. Deputy Police Chief George Peacock said that they had fashioned the dummy bomb "all in fun."

The charges were brought by Assistant District Attorney Homer V. Walsh.

Hamilton to Aid Landon

to join Gov. Landon this week on his vacation trip.

Arthur M. Curtis, national committeeman from Missouri, joined the headquarters staff yesterday and will take over most of Hamilton's duties.

In the Pennsylvania primaries on April 28 Senator Borah will appear alone on the Republican preference ballot. Delegates to the national convention are chosen at the same time, but the preference vote is not binding on them.

On the Democratic ballot President Roosevelt and Breckinridge, adviser to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, will both appear. The Keystone State is the first in which Breckinridge has actually filed against the Executive, though similar action in Maryland and Ohio has been expected.

When New Hampshire seelcts its national convention delegates today Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher and a native of New Hampshire, is expected to be backed by most of the Republicans selected to go to Cleveland.

Moses for Knox.

Former Senator George H. Moses, a candidate for delegate at large, has indorsed Knox strongly, as has Maj. Francis P. Murphy, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, according to the Associated Press.

Two of the 16 Republican candidates for seven places as delegate at large are backers of Landon, though not pledged to him.

President Roosevelt has the pledged support of practically all of the candidates for selection as delegate to the Philadelphia convention.

The Republican National Committee's funds campaign was placed on a basis of "participation certificates," printed in red and blue ink on white paper, and certifying that the purchaser is a participant "in the work of bringing about a return to the fundamental principles of government." Each certificate, to bear the name of the purchaser, will cost one dollar.

Each certificate will bear the portraits of Lincoln and Washington with quotations from each. Their issuance was termed by Henry P. Fletcher, national chairman, "the beginning of what we hope will be a permanent method of financing the Republican Party through annual contributions from the rank and file of the Republican and independent voters."

Fletcher reported yesterday that since December 31, when the party had a surplus of $260,480, the national committee had received $261,408 in contributions, against expenditures of $165,599.

A "Stop Roosevelt" movement in the Democratic Party was believed to have been discussed by Smith, Reed and Ely at their conference last week. In some circles it was reported that Bainbridge Colby also was present at the talk.

"Of course we talked politics," Ely was quoted as saying. "What else would you expect from three such men. I believe I can say, however, that the meeting was of no great national significance."

Two more delegates were pledged to Gov. Landon last night by the Sixth Oklahoma District, the Associated Press reported. Of 11 delegates so far selected in Oklahoma, four have been instructed for Landon and the others uninstructed.

$23,294,568 Legislative Bill Reaches House

Measure Providing for Several Activities May Pass This Week.

By the Associated Press.

The seventh of nine regular annual appropriation bills was brought to the House yesterday providing $23,294,568 for running the legislative establishment during the 1937 fiscal year.

Consideration of the measure was delayed until today, but passage this week was virtually certain.

Only two regular appropriation measures—for the State, Commerce, Justice and Labor departments and for the Navy—were left, with another deficiency bill expected to include from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 of relief funds.

One deficiency measure already has been enacted.

Like all of the bills before it this session, except the District of Columbia money measure, the legislative supply bill was below budget estimates. It was $877,203 under what the budget called for and $640,092 less than the current appropriation. The Senate and House, Library of Congress, Government Printing Office and additional minor activities of the Government are covered.

The Appropriations Committee allowed money for a half dozen more pages to wait upon members on the floor, boosted the telephone and telegraph allowance $5,000 to $95,000 and set up a $15,000 reserve operating fund for the House restaurant.

On the other hand, it turned down a $64,000 item for two new elevators on the Senate side, $35,800 for 21 more Library of Congress employes and funds for remodeling the House press gallery. There was allowed $2,225,000 for continuing Library annex construction and funds for repair to the Capitol.

The committee also approved a bill to authorize spending of $1,068,825 for cleaning up the work of the repealed cotton, tobacco and potato control acts and for paying freight bills and administrative expenses incurred under an emergency seed purchasing program of last year. No new appropriation was involved, the money coming out of the $296,185,000 carried in the deficiency act for discharging Government obligations under the invalidated agricultural adjustment act.

WPA Inquiry Asked, Hinting Delay on Relief

By the Associated Press.

A hint of prolonged Congressional debate over President Roosevelt's impending request for additional relief appropriations came yesterday in a demand by Senator James J. Davis for a "full and complete" investigation of the Works Progress Administration.

Immediately after Davis introduced a resolution directing the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments to make the inquiry, Chairman J. Hamilton Lewis said he would support it.

Other developments that came as Congress awaited the President's relief message included:

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg urged defeat of a $29,000,000 amendment to the War Department appropriation bill for continuing work on the Florida Ship Canal and the Passamaquoddy Bay project—to date financed from work relief funds.

To Defend Program.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, the majority leader, announced he would deliver a Senate speech today, entitled "Boondoggling," in defense of the work relief program.

Harry L. Hopkins received a protest from 15 Illinois WPA supervisors against what they called an attempt to make them contribute to the campaign fund of a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes reported to the Senate that PWA had approved 1,476 municipal projects beyond its present program, but that it lacked the $227,047,662 necessary to carry them out.

Projects Analyzed.

Hopkins issued press releases analyzing WPA projects in 45 States, the District of Columbia and New York City, intended to show that most of the expenditures were for substantial projects and not for what has been attacked as "boondoggling."

In another report, Ickes brought the New Deal's controverted "power yardstick" program before the Senate with a statement that he had allotted about $78,000,000 for 298 municipal gas and electric power systems. The report was submitted in response to a resolution by Senator George W. Norris asking a resume of the situation.

In introducing his investigation resolution, Davis said WPA funds were being used in Pennsylvania "to advance partisan political interests"—a reference to the recent attempt by the chairman of the Indiana County, Pa., Democratic committee to solicit contributions from WPA workers.

Letter Copy Produced.

Davis also produced what he called a facsimile of a letter from David L. Lawrence, Pennsylvania Democratic State chairman, to a WPA worker which he said accompanied 24 subscription blanks for "We, the People"—described as a party organ.

Hopkins, who had his agents investigate the Indiana County, Pa., charges, declined to comment immediately on the protest of WPA supervisors at Benton, Ill. They contended that a representative of the Harrisburg office had tried to collect campaign funds from them for Herman N. Bundesen, who is opposing Gov. Henry Horner in the Democratic primary.

Stranded Pea Pickers Will Get U. S. Food

Los Angeles, March 9 (U.P.).—The Federal Government tonight prepared to rush food to a colony of pea pickers reported stranded in a harvest workers' camp near Santa Maria, Calif. Rains and a crop blight left them destitute.

The colony, reports to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation said, includes 2,000 workers and their families. It is within a few miles of populous farming centers, but without food or funds.

Warsaw Students Strike.

Warsaw, March 9 (U.P.).—Four thousand students today "barricaded" themselves in Warsaw Technical College for a hunger strike against high tuition fees. They locked themselves in the laboratories and lecture rooms, with blankets and rations for three days. Leaders announced they will not leave the building until tuition is reduced.

Strikers' Chief To Fight Banks In Lift Tie-up

Insurance Firms Targets Also in Blast Charging War on N. Y. Union.

By the United Press.

New York, March 9.—James J. Bambrick, Service Union president directing the New York elevator strike, tonight charged that banks and insurance companies are behind the move to break the walkout and that tomorrow he will set out to "break every bank and insurance company in New York City."

"This strike is nothing (to date) to what you'll see tomorrow," Bambrick said when the realty advisory board informed Mayor F. H. LaGuardia it could not accept his compromise settlement of the controversy.

"If it's going to be war, let's have it now—war to the bitter end."

Bambrick said banks and insurance companies financing large buildings, have spent, in the eight days of the strike, more money than it would cost to pay the raises asked by striking employes for a year.

Board Lacks Authority.

While the board called its statement "a qualified acceptance" of LaGuardia's terms, it pointed out that it had no authority to bind building owners to any terms. It added that if the mayor's proposal were submitted to the building owners, it undoubtedly would be rejected.

The union already had accepted the proposal, which called for establishment of a "preferential shop," with arbitration of wages, hours and working conditions to follow. The preferential shop would give union members preference whenever building owners hire additional help.

Premises Big Push.

Bambrick had countermanded an order calling out more elevator operators in the Grand Central zone and extending the strike to Brooklyn and Queens in the hope that the realty advisory board would accept LaGuardia's arbitration offer.

Regarding the authority of the realty board to negotiate for individual building owners, the board's statement read:

"The limitations surrounding the authority of the board to act for its members has at all times been made clear * * * This advisory board, as its name indicates, has only advisory powers in this matter and is without power and authority to sign any agreement with Local 32-B for its members.

"We are satisfied that if your proposal, in its present form, were submitted to a referendum of our members it would be overwhelmingly defeated. This conclusion is strengthened by conferences with part of our membership on Saturday and Sunday."

Columbia Workers Walk Out.

Although Bambrick said no more buildings had been "pulled" today, strikes occurred throughout the metropolitan area. Workers in 13 buildings at Columbia University walked out.

Sporadic walkouts also occurred in Newark, N. J., and Robert Everett, union organizer, was taken to police headquarters for questioning.

The union threatened to call a strike of 250 workers in 40 buildings in downtown Newark.

Bambrick called all these walkouts "accidents" and indicated he had not ordered them or was not even aware they were going to occur.

Two Hurt in Newark.

Newark, N. J., March 9 (AP).—Disorder broke out today in the early hours of a strike of service employes in a disputed number of large downtown office buildings.

Reports of the scope and effect of the walkout conflicted, building officials challenging the claim of union leaders that 11 buildings were affected and that more than 200 workers had answered the call to strike for wage and hour adjustments.

A riot was barely averted at the Kinney Building, where police and private guards stemmed the rush of a group of strikers and sympathizers who sought to reach non-striking elevator operators.

Injured in the melee, John Seno, 22, was treated at City Hospital for head injuries.

George A. Henkel, East Orange college student, was beaten as he rode in an elevator in the Griffith Building, where union men said non-union workers were employed.

Police cruising squads rushed from one point to another all day as tension increased and disturbances threatened.

Chaplin-Goddard Talk Again Stirs Hollywood

Hollywood, March 9 (AP).—The film colony, still confident that Charles Chaplin and his leading lady, Paulette Goddard, are secretly engaged—or married—speculated tonight along a new angle: That no announcement of their romantic status will be made until Miss Goddard quits the screen.

The reason: Public announcement of the comedian's marriage or wedding plans with the pretty brunette might detract from the value of their filmed romance.

The Chaplin-Goddard comment cropped up again today when a Shanghai correspondent to the Reuters (British) News Agency reported Miss Goddard had announced her engagement to Chaplin there. Both refused to comment.

Liberals Block Forming Of New Greek Cabinet

Athens, March 9 (AP).—Themistokles Sophoulis, Venizelist leader, notified King George today he had not been able to complete the assignment to form a new government because of liberal opposition.

The students returned to classes from which they walked out last week, charging Paden was the victim of city politics.

For a time armed guards patroled the city hall because of rumors that arounsed citizens planned a coup to seize the municipal government.

Dragon Sulks About Zoo Cage; Reptiles Arrive; Little Bear Dies

Hybrid Cub Succumbs to Unknown Cause but 3 Others Live.

One of the four hybrid cubs born two weeks ago to Ramona, the huge Kadiak bear, died late Sunday night, Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo, announced yesterday.

The little bear was described as a "dirty white" animal by Dr. Mann. With her mother she had been kept in the Zoo hospital, alongside her three brothers and sisters. When the keepers, who are the only persons allowed to see Ramona and her brood, went into the quarters yesterday morning they noticed the cub was not suckling, as were the others.

Examination showed she had been dead some time. What caused her death was not immediately determined.

Father of the cubs is lumbering Snow, the huge Polar bear.

Chances for survival of the rest of Ramona and Snowy's strange brown-white family seem excellent, Dr. Mann said.

But it will no tbe until early May that the fuzzy, furry infants, who barely have their eyes open, will be exhibited to the public.

Both Ramona and Snowy are Alaskan bears. Ramona is named after the Kadiak islands she and her massive brown kin inhabit.

Old Komodo Refuses Food; May Be Lazy; Jennier Back.

Pleasantly tanned by the Cuban sun, Jennier returned to his post yesterday with two vicious Cuban tree boas, more than 150 assorted lizards, frogs and toads, five giant anolis (large false Cuban chameleons), a family of tiny humming birds, several white-bellied blacksnakes and several hutias, which are Cuban rodents which the residents of the island republic devour with the same gusto their northern neighbors do rabbits.

These Jennier bought for the Zoo in his last day at Havana, before he had his automobile brought back to Florida for the long drive north to Washington.

He went to Cuba for a rest. He went for the climate and for the sidewalk cafes and for the balmy breezes, which blow like kisses from hacienda balconies.

Toughts Strayed to Zoo.

That was all very fine for awhile, and then he began to think of the Zoo, and he wondered about his beloved Komodo dragon, his cobras, his scaled and graceful reptile friends.

Was the Komodo eating well?

And then, he recalled, that empty space in the cage where the late Cuban tree boa coiled and hissed at even the prettiest little girls in pigtails who came in all innocence to watch.

"We need a tree boa or two at the Zoo," he confided to his wife, Julia, as they sat sipping coffee at a sidewalk cafe.

"We need other things, as well," he continued, looking into the depths of his cup. "I think I'll see what I can do, and perhaps Dr. Mann will feel the same way I do about it."

So Jennifer went to a pet store, with an interpreter. The owner deals in animals of all sorts. First came the boas, strapping fellows about 8 feet long, with the dispositions of double-crossed dictators. And then the little curl-tailed lizards, and several varieties of frogs, that hopped about like ideas in a class of creative writing. Presently his purchase was complete.

Drive North With Menagerie.

The Jenniers drove all the way north with their reptilian menagerie. The snakes were in bags, and never removed, even in tourists' cabins. The birds were in cages, as were the hutias and the frogs and lizards.

"We felt quite safe about the snakes, but the lizards are restless and ingenious. In fact, one escaped, and probably is at large in Georgia now," confided Jennier, who formerly handled reptiles for the John Robinson circus.

Yesterday Jennier was busy, back at his job for the first time. He saw that the new charges were taken care of and redistributed. Then he went to see his old friend, the ancient Komodo, descendant of prehistoric times.

The Komodo shot his forked tongue unpleasantly against a slab of filet mignon. He would not eat. It must be the spring, Jennier surmised.

"Spring's eternal, you see," he observed. "Even the suarian whose ancestors ruled the swamps is lazy—too lazy to have his dinner. Or perhaps he knows I'm back, and is excited at seeing his old friend again."

2d Suspect Held In Bank Robbery

The second suspect in the robbery of the Old Dominion Bank in Ballston, Va., February 10, was arrested yesterday by Department of Justice agents in Covington, Va., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

He is John W. McDaniel, alias Woodrow Wilson McDaniel. His brother, Dennis McDaniel, was arrested for the same crime February 27 and is now held in Alexandria. John was en route there after his arrest yesterday.

Dennis McDaniel, according to the Department of Justice, made a confession after his arrest, admitting that he and his brother committed the $2,700 robbery. The brothers both have criminal records.

Americans Escape In Chinese Clash

Shanghai, March 9 (AP).—Dispatches from Hankow tonight said the regular garrison at Hwankshih-kiang had driven off 800 bandits who were threatening the city.

The United States gunboat Tutuila had left Hankow for Hawankshi-hkiang, 50 miles away on the Yangtze River, to protect Americans. The only two Americans reported there were said to be safe. They are Francis J. Middendorf, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Raymond J. Hartig, of Kansas City, Mo., both at the Catholic Mission.

American missionaries at Taiyuan-fu and Fenchon in Shansi Province also were reported safe from Communists who had invaded the province. Troop reinforcements and airplanes from Nanking were pushing the reds to the west.

McGrady in Boston, Seeks Strike Settlement

Boston, March 9 (AP).—Federal labor officials announced Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, would come from Washington tonight to try to settle a strike of 4,000 ladies garment workers.

McGrady decided to take a hand in arbitrating the strike, now in its twelfth day, after discussing the situation with Miss Anna Weinstock, Labor Department conciliator.

Spanish Reds Rip Nazi Flag At Consulate

Stern Protest by German Envoy Follows; Eleven Killed in Riots.

By the United Press.

Cadiz, Spain, March 9.—Communists ripped the flag from above the German consulate tonight and trampled on it.

The demonstraton came at the end of a riotous day in which reds marched through southern Spain, burning churches and convents, smashing holy images in the streets and battling troops and police with guns and clubs.

11 Known Dead.

The riots broke out yesterday and continued through the night and today. So far, 11 are known dead and 24 wounded. Troops patroled the city in army trucks, equipped with machine guns, rifles and teargas bombs.

The mob stormed Santa Maria Convent, stole an image of Christ from the altar and burned it in the street.

At least nine Catholic churches, convents and schools were raided and fired.

The most serious clash occurred at Toledo, where rightists and leftists battled each other with pistols and rifles for hours. There left Republicans and one Communist were killed, and nine others were wounded gravely. The battle occurred in the center of the city, with both sides throwing up barricades in the streets.

Two demonstrators were killed at Castril, and at least one each at Palencia, Baracaldo and Seville. Many were wounded.

Marcial Martin, a laborer, was shot and killed by storm guards dispersing a demonstration at Toledo. Reinforcements were sent there from Madrid to restore order.

Funeral Is Signal.

Martin's funeral was the signal for declaration of general strike which paralyzed Toledo. All business houses were closed.

Numerous valuable art objects were destroyed by the mobs.

At Merced, extremists first wrecked the interior and then fired the Catholic Church, the "Slaves of the Heart of Mary" Convent, the Catholic Workers' Center, a school sponsored by the "Society of Fathers of Families" and a seminary.

Two newspapermen here were beaten by the mob. Strong army cordons were thrown around all public buildings.

Soldiers killed one participant in a Socialist and Syndicalist manifestation demanding employment.

Press Intimidation Charged to Stores

By the Associated Press.

Intimidation of newspapers by large advertisers opposing the Robinson-Patman legislation to restrict chain store quantity buying discounts and other practices was charged in the House yesterday by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas.

He said the institute of distribution, "representing large banker-controlled chains," had sent out a statement to some newspapers "insinuating they were going to spend $9,500,000 in advertising and if the papers wanted any of it they had better oppose the Robinson-Patman bill."

"Already the newspapers are somewhat intimidated," Patman declared. "And I don't think it right for them to be further intimidated by stating the amount in millions and millions of dollars that is going to be spent in advertising and intimating they won't get any of it unless they oppose the bill."

French Savant to Open Talk Series Tomorrow

The daily talks, which will end Saturday, March 14, will cover the following consecutive themes: "Firdausi, Inspirer of Art;" "Islam and China;" "The Height of Persian Miniature Painting, Fifteenth Century," and "Behzad, the Great Painter of the Persian Renaissance."

Girl Suicide

Harry Lasoer, of the Chastleton Apartments.

The man described as Miss Trathen's "boy friend," according to police, is Johnny Hallett, of 21 L street northeast.

The guests at the party said that Miss Trathen was afraid to call Hallett's home because his parents did not like her phoning.

Therefore, they said, she had one of the men at the party call him, after which she took over the receiver.

Following the conversation, they said she changed from a gay, laughing girl to one obviously suffering from an attack of "blues."

Police said they learned that Miss Trathen and Hallett had a "quarrel" Friday night.

Up until that day Miss Trathen had been working at the Irvin Sandwich Shop, 500 block of Thirteenth street northwest. She resigned then, saying she had a new job. Yesterday she called there at 1:45 p. m. to collect her pay.

Then she returned to her room, which she rented from Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Appold, in the W street apartment house.

She left there about 4 o'clock to go to the Livingston home. The others already were there with the exception of Livingston, who was at work.

While awaiting dinner, Miss Trathen showed Miss Shearer about the house. In the bedroom she opened a cabinet attached to the head of the bed. Within this was a .38-caliber revolver.

It was this that the young girl used to kill herself two hours later.

Miss Trathen was the daughter of William H. Trathen, of Tuxedo, Md., an employe in the State, War and Navy Building. Her sister, Mrs. Loyette Beall, lives at 1222 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Livingston, owner of the house where the girl committed suicide, is the father of an 18-year-old boy.

Drive Seeks to Aid Jews' Emigration

To obtain funds for the emigration and settlement of German Jews, the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, under the direction of Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, now is conducting a campaign in Washington.

From May 15, 1933, to December 31, 1935, the society assisted in the emigration of 13,428 Jews from Germany to the United States, Canada, the Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay, South Africa, China and other countries. Toward the expenditure for transportation, the society and its affiliated groups contributed $341,008.23, more than half the total cost.

An additional $100,000 was used for direct emigration work in Germany. In consequence, 4,122 Jews were enabled to leave Germany during July, August and September, 1935.

The Washington office is at 1317 F street northwest. Isidore Hershfield is representative.

Joseph A. Wilner is chairman of the Washington committee. The other committee members are Dr. Abram Simon, Morris Cafritz, Bernard Danzansky, Morris Garfinkle, Isidore Hershfield, E. I. Kauffmann, Benjamin Meiman, Louis Novick, John M. Safer, Louis E. Spiegler and Charles J. Stein. Dr. Kornblith is campaign director.

Gortz, German Spy, Sentenced To 4-Year Term

By the Associated Press.

London, March 9.—A sentence of four years' imprisonment was imposed today upon Dr. Hermann Gortz, middle-aged German lawyer, after he was convicted of espionage by a jury which included two women.

Sketching secret airdromes in these days when Europe is filled with "spy scares" is an "offense which must be dealt with seriously by any country," said the judge in passing sentence.

Gortz received the sentence with a stiff bow from the dock in Old Bailey. He snapped out "No" when asked if he had anything to say.

Young Woman Aid.

While Gortz was being sentenced, Fraulein Marianne Emig, attractive young woman who allegedly aided him in ferreting out British air force secrets, was reported to be in Munich. She fled the country when Gortz was arrested.

The charge against her will remain "open" because of her absence. Gortz was technically charged with violating the official secrets act.

The jury quickly returned a verdict of guilty, after examining one of Gortz's diaries, describing a motorcycle trip he made to a British airfield. He had contended he was using the air information to write novel.

Prohibited Place.

"There is no doubt," said the presiding judge, "that the sketch is a sketch of a prohibited place, and the type aimed at by the legisalture" when adopting the official secrets act.

During his testimony, Gortz said he was in the German intelligence service during the World War, and questioned "brought-down" Allied fliers. He asserted he gained much valuable information about the United States air force from fuestioning Allied fliers.

Following the World War, Gortz practiced law for a year and a half in the United States, but was forced to leave when he refused to become an American citizen.

Vitamin D Overdose Hinted as Death Cause

San Francisco, March 9 (AP).—Possibility that the death of a noted German physician, seeking a cure for arthritis, may have been caused by overdoses of concentrated vitamin D was discussed today.

Dr. Gertrude M. Mitchell, of the University of California Hospital said that for 18 days before his death February 24 Dr. Ferdinand Wilhelm Vowinckel took 2,100,000 units of vitamin D daily.

Use of the vitamin in treating arthritis is experimetnal and a paper on the subject, published last September, recommended a dosage of 250,000 units.

Dr. Vowinckel was chief surgeon of the California Women's Hospital here. His body was cremated. Coroner T. B. W. Leland scheduled an inquest for tomorrow.

Labor Housing Plan Is Offered To President

Roosevelt 'Interested,' Says Green; Congress Gets FHA Extension.

Fourfold activity in the Nation's housing problem yesterday brought these developments:

1. Labor leaders, at a White House conference, presented to the President their long-range low-cost $500,000,000 housing plan.
2. Officials of the Government's lending agencies reported swifter repayment of loans already advanced.
3. In both the Senate and the House the Administration measure extending the Title I (repair and modernization) feature of the housing act, from April 1 to December 31 of this year was introduced.
4. Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald revised upward a former prediction that 175,000 houses would be built in 1936, setting his new guess at 250,000.

Roosevelt "Interested."

William Green, American Federation of Labor president, who presented labor's housing plan at a conference attended by President Roosevelt, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, and labor leaders said the President seemed "greatly interested," although he did not commit himself.

This plan proposes a half-billion-dollar revolving fund from the Treasury under which low-interest loans would be made to builders to further housing progress.

The officials of two Federal lending agencies, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Home Owners Loan Corporation, reported such substantial repayments of billions loaned to advance the recovery drive that they predicted it would be possible to slash off more than $1,000,000,000 of existing authorizations. At recent White House conferences the President has forecast at least a $1,000,000,000 cancellation.

57 Per Cent Repayment.

The RFC reported that on February 29, 57 per cent of its total loans of $5,958,257,301 had been paid.

The HOLC reported that it had received $230,244,000 in principal and interest payments of its $3,000,000,000 in loans. Lending activities of the HOLC are terminated on June 13.

The Administration housing bill, revising slightly the housing act, and extending Title I to December 31, was introduced yesterday by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, and by Representative Henry Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, both of them chairmen of their respective house's banking committees.

Introduction came as the April 1 expiration of the present law loomed nearer. The bill extends the temporary home modernization loan program of the original act, while cutting the maximum insurance liability of the FHA from $200,000 to $100,000, with Government insurance on individual cases reduced from 20 to 10 per cent.

Surety Authority Retained

The measure retains the authority of the FHA to insure private five-year loans up to $2,000 for residences and up to $50,000 for business properties.

Title II, the permanent and continuing program of mutual mortgage insurance, which will continue indefinitely, is not considered in the new legislation, since it does not expire with the other part of the act.

Administrator McDonald announced yesterday that a resurvey of the home building situation throughout the country had caused him to jump up his preliminary estimate of new home construction. He stated that about 85,000 homes were erected last year, according to FHA estimates based on Bureau of Labor Statistics reports. A number of experts had set the figure around 75,000.

Guadalajara, Mexico, March 9 (AP). Three passengers were killed and several others wounded when rebels attacked a train near Atotonilco, Jalisco, early today.

The rebels blocked the track, forcing the train to halt, attempted to strip the passengers of their valuables and opened fire when resistance was offered.

Federal troops were sent in pursuit of the attackers.

Sisson Scores Mrs. Jenckes

appeared at hearings twice, both times to read carefully worded statements which made broad, sweeping, unfounded charges against the members of the Board of Education. Both times she refused to be cross-examined.

"She did not produce a scintilla of evidence to support a single one of her assertions or charges. As proof she has offered in testimony the hearings of the Blanton subcommittee—hearings which were held in executive session. The Blanton sub-committee had no business taking that testimony. It was supposed to be dealing with the appropriations bill, not the teaching of communism in local schools.

"The questioning of the school officials was unfair and full of inferences and insinuations which they were never given a fair opportunity to disprove. Some of the witnesses, whose testimony was admitted, should have been cross-examined by this committee. For example there was H. Serkowich, a clerk of Mrs. Jenckes."

Wanted to Grill Clerk.

Earlier in the day, when Sisson protested against the inclusion of Blanton hearings into the record at the request of Mrs. Jenckes, he asked Ambrose J. Kennedy to call the clerk to testify. Serkowich, who had been listening to Mrs. Jenckes read her statement, hurriedly left the room before he could be called.

"I wanted to cross-examine Serkowich," Sisson declared in his summation later in the afternoon. "I wanted to attack his credibility as a witness. But I am certain he will not have the courage to appear before this committee."

With the hearings completed, Representative Kennedy, chairman of the sub-committee, announced that he would rush the printing of the hearings which he hoped would be completed in two or three weeks. Until then the sub-committee will take no action. The full committee should be prepared either to kill or report out the two Sisson bills by the end of the month, he said.

From the questioning directed at the witnesses by members of the sub-committee, a favorable report on both bills is generally expected.

Two Contentions Stressed.

The possibility that one or two members of the sub-committee might seek a compromise by reporting out the first Sisson bill which amended to the rider to permit the teaching of the facts of communism was raised in the examination of the witnesses and Representative Sisson sought to forestall any such eventuality yesterday by expressing regret at "ever having introduced the first bill."

Yesterday's hearing, which was devoted principally to opponents of the Sisson bill, brought out that their advocacy of retention of the rider, in most cases, was based upon two contentions:

First, that to teach the facts of communism was synonymous with denouncing the Soviet government, as there was no good whatsoever in communism.

Second, that the red rider should be retained to compel the Board of Education to teach those "facts" of communism.

Repressive Measures Scored.

Under direct questioning from former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, a member of the sub-committee, E. Brooke Fetty, of the Maryland American Legion, admitted that his complaint was against Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and the School Board and that the first Sisson bill, permitting the teaching of the facts of communism but forbidding their advocacy, would "cover the situation, providing that something was put in there that would state the board's opinion on those facts."

When Gov. Brewster pointed out that if "repressive measures of this sort were in effect 300 or 400 years ago there wouldn't be an American form of government today, as its principles were contrary to the established interests of the day," Fetty agreed that "the suppression of free speech was the last thing we have in view."

"The fault lies with Dr. Ballou and Mr. Jones (head of the department of social studies in the high schools), who refuse to denounce communism," Fetty continued.

Dr. Ballou Attacked.

"I believe that the harm done by not mentioning communism is not so great as the harm done by the present presentation in the schools."

"But don't you think that it might be better to reason with people than to apply the methods of the inquisition?" asked Gov. Brewster. "We are taking pretty drastic action when in America we practically adopt the methods of the inquisition."

"I admit there's a danger," conceded Fetty, "but the danger is not as great as the threat of communism."

Questioned by Representative Sisson, Fetty admitted that the red rider has given Communists "a lot more publicity than they deserve."

Dr. Ballou and the Board of Education also were attacked by Mrs. Mary H. Worrell, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, who demanded their resignations and asked for a law that would permit the residents of the District to elect their own superintendent of schools and school board.

Although the teaching of the facts of communism was not objected to by Mrs. Worrell, Frank L. Peckham, chairman of the public school committee of the District American Legion, who followed her to the stand, didn't think "much harm would be done by ignoring the subject entirely."

Retention of the rider to force a change in the Board of Education's policies also was urged by Mrs. Jenckes.

"Sufficient evidence has been produced to warrant withholding action on these bills until Congress can thoroughly investigate the method of formation and operation of the Board of Education as it is now constituted," she declared toward the close of the five-page mimeographed statement which she read.

When Mrs. Jenckes made her accusation of "bigotry and religious intolerance," she was interrupted by Representative Kennedy, who asked sharply.

Intolerance Charged.

"What has that to do with communism?"

"I want to show that the Board of Education shares the bigotry and religious intolerance that are characteristics of communism,' 'she replied.

At one point in the reading of her statement, when she said "I refuse to dignify any attack made on me personally by a reply at this time," she was interrupted again, this time by derisive laughter from the crowd in the room.

Chairman Kennedy rapped for order, only to be forced to use his gavel again a few minutes later, when Mrs. Jenckes concluded her statement by saying:

"I place this brief in the record on its merit and I do not desire to be cross-examined. The evidence speaks for itself. I am willing that it should be considered or not considered on its merits as it stands in the record."

The statement was greeted by boos from the crowd.

Objects to Question.

That Mrs. Jenckes would refuse to be cross-examined was indicated almost at the outset of the hearing when she objected to a question put to Fetty by Representative Henry Ellenbogen on the ground that he was not a member of the sub-committee and therefore not entitled to examine witnesses. At last Monday's session, Representative Ellenbogen indicated he would attempt to question Mrs. Jenckes.

Mrs. Jenckes later raised the same objection to a question put to Fetty by Sisson and was also upheld on the point by Chairman Kennedy. Later, asked directly by Sisson whether or not she would permit him to direct questions at the witnesses, she agreed "it is all right with me if the witness doesn't object."

When the committee reconvened after the noon recess, members of the Board of Education individually refuted the five charges made by Mrs. Jenckes.

Others testifying yesterday were: Against the Sisson bill, Wilbur Ayers, Roscoe F. Walter and Frank T. Shull, of the Conduit Road Citizens Association; in favor of repeal of the rider, Representatives David Lewis, of Maryland, and Gerald, J. Boileau, of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, Prof. Robert A. Maurer and Henry Gilligan, members of the Board of Education.

Mayor of New Orleans May Resign for Peace

New Orleans, March 9 (U.P.).—Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, last enemy of the Huey P. Long political machine left in an important public office in Louisiana, offered to resign tonight if the Legislature would restore "home rule" to New Orleans.

The mayor said he would make the sacrifice to restore peace between State and city governments. He asked also that the Legislature enact social security legislation.

Walmsley, former president of the United States Conference of Mayors, is little more than a figurehead in office. The old regular faction, ancient rulers of city government, deserted Walmsley and surrendered City Hall to Huey Long's statehouse machine a year ago. Since then, A. M. Pratt, city finance commissioner, has dominated the commission council with the blessings of the State administration.

U. S. Shortly Will Recognize Paraguay Rule

Act to Clear Way for 100% Participation in All-American Session.

By the Associated Press.

Decision by United States officials to extend recognition shortly to the new government of Paraguay was reported last night in authoritative quarters.

The proposed action was regarded as particularly significant in the light of general belief here that such recognition would implement arrangements for President Roosevelt's projected All-American peace conference. New interest has been turned toward the parley by the European crisis precipitated by Germany's rearming of the Rhineland.

At the State Department it was said yesterday that formal affirmative replies to the President's invitation to the conference already had been received from heads of all Central and South American governments except Paraguay.

This led to belief that an early White House announcement would be forthcoming concerning additional details of the projected anti-war meeting.

The Paraguayan uprising led by Col. Rafael Franco, which unseated the government headed by former President Eusebio Ayala, coincided with the arrival there of Mr. Roosevelt's personal letter to Aylala broaching the suggestion for the inter-American conference to be held next summer or fall in Buenos Aires to consider means of safeguarding peace in the Western Hemisphere.

This resulted in some complication. Franco took the position that he was unable to reply formally to a letter addressed to his predecessor. Nevertheless the publicly indorsed the proposal.

In view of this, State Department officials proceeded with shaping of plans for the parley.

Death Scene Swept By Forest Blaze

A forest fire, which police believed incendiary, raged for two hours yesterday around the base of Saddleback Ridge, Mount Rainier. It was on top of this ridge that the body of the murdered Corinna Loring was found last November.

Chief Eugene Plumer, of the Mount Rainier police department, declared, however, he did not believe the fire had been started by anyone desiring to destroy evidence. Rather, he said, he felt it was the work of neighborhood children.

He based his deductions on the fact that four other brush fires broke out in the vicinity about the same time, bringing volunteer firemen from Mount Rainier, Cottage City, Brentwood, Hyattsville and Riverdale.

One of the fires, near Campbell and Cedar streets, threatened a dwelling. There was another of the fires at Queens Chapel road and Eastern avenue; another on the Huntemann property, Thirty-fourth and Fir streets, and another that menaced the gas holder on Chillum road. The damage caused by the fires was small.

U. C. Indicts Eleven In Navy Food Plot

Los Angeles, March 9 (U.P.).—A Federal grand jury tonight returned indictments against 11 persons, charging participation in a scheme to monopolize sale of poultry and foodstuffs to the United States Navy at exorbitant prices.

E. K. Zuckerman, Los Angeles attorney, and Pete Riley, former chief petty officer in charge of naval storehouses at San Pedro, Calif., were among the 11. Most of the others are merchants.

'Wheelbarrow Patrol' Policeman Dies at 79

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—Capt. Harvey P. Morhiser, 79, veteran policeman, whose first arrest was a drunken man hauled to the police station in a wheelbarrow, died at his home here today. He served the police department here for 53 years, retiring a year ago.

Capt. Morhiser joined the force in 1881. His first arrest was a snoring drunk near a saloon. There were no patrol wagons in those days, so the then Private Morhiser loaded him into a borrowed wheelbarrow and took him to the station.

In 1931 he attained the rank of captain and was put in command of the Missing Persons Bureau.

Mrs. Roosevelt Pleads for End Of War Profits

First Lady, in Michigan Speech, Sees No Danger of European War.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 9.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened a lecture tour here tonight with a plea that profit be taken out of war, and the prediction that "the war psychology under which we have lived always" will be gradually worn away by each effort toward world peace.

The First Lady came here from Washington today to speak at the Fountain Street Baptist Church. A capacity audience of 1,700 heard her lecture. She said she would speak at Toledo tomorrow and would go from there to Cleveland.

"I believe," she said, "that if all nations could take all profits to individuals out of the munitions industry, we would be making worthwhile advance, even though we were still obliged to keep on building up our defenses.

"At least there would be no profit in it, and people would be paying directly in taxes for what the various nations had to spend on defenses.

"It is impossible for any nation to bring about peace by itself," she said. "It is self-evident that as long as the rest of the world is armed, every nation must be armed."

Discussing the present European situation during a press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the belief that Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler's abrogation of the Locarno Treaty would not result in world war. She said she believed the outcome of the situation would be the stabilization and strengthening ultimately of the League of Nations.

"The ways of peace are perhaps as numerous as the causes of war," Mrs. Roosevelt told her audience. "When people behave as though it were a very simple matter to keep a nation at peace, they show that they have never studied the various and devious ways by which nations find themselves at war."

She added "there is no question but what the possession of armaments beyond what is legitimate for defense is a temptation to use them."

"They say that women are the incentive for which men make money," she said. "Very well, then, women can make it clear to men that they do not wish money made in this."

Jones Asks Bill To Free R. F. C. Stock From Tax

Requests House to Reconsider Measure to Halt Levies by States.

After Speaker Joseph W. Byrns had received a plea from Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, urging him to seek means to have the House reconsider the bill exempting from taxation national bank obligations owned by the RFC, House leaders discovered yesterday a means to revive the measure.

The bill which the House defeated on February 25 by a vote of 172 to 164, in an unexpected Administration setback, was a House bill, the leaders noted. Under consideration of the House Banking Committee, there is still the identical Senate bill, technically, which is therefore not dead, and may be reported out, with or without modifications.

The situation came about when the Supreme Court ruled in a recent decision that preferred bank stock held by the RFC could be taxed by individual States.

To adjust this situation a bill was prepared, and passed by the Senate, which would exempt the RFC from state or municipal taxation. With majority leaders dozing, the bill was unexpectedly defeated in the House, although some leaders said it was not considered an Administration measure, and had therefore been allowed to take its own course.

In his letter to the Speaker, Jones cited Section 10 of the RFC act, which expressly provides that the RFC is exempt from State and other taxes. He further pointed out the "long-recognized principle" that States do not tax instrumentalities of the Federal Government. He said that unless exemption legislation is passed, the RFC will be subject to taxes in 37 States, affecting $229,000,000 in RFC holdings with taxes aggregating about $5,500,000 a year. Since no allowance was made in the RFC structure for the payment of taxes on preferred stock, the situation needs serious consideration, it was indicated.

Jones also fears that an effort will be made to tax the corporation's capital notes and debentures, amounting to more than $15,000,000 annually.

Ship Grant Bills Debated; Mail Subsidy Ended

Postoffice's $26,500,000 Marine Appropriation Item Eliminated.

By the Associated Press.

A new clash over rival ship subsidy legislation coincided yesterday with eliminatoin from the Postoffice supply bill of a $26,500,000 appropriation for continuing present ocean mail contracts.

The Senate Appropriations Committee sliced off the item generally regarded as an "indirect" subsidy for United States merchant marine. At the same time, it increased from $9,450,000 to $14,300,000 the proposed allowance for carrying ocean mail on a poundage basis.

Under existing legislation, the President's power to cancel mail contracts would lapse March 31. Pending legislatoin would replace contracts with outright constructoin and operating subsidies for shipping.

As Senators Copeland (Democrat), New York, and Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, warmly debated the merits of their rival bills at a Commerce Committee hearing, reports arose that the controversial issue might be "junked" to permit early adjournment of Congress.

Support of Departments.

The Copeland bill has the support of both the Postoffice and Commerce Departments, which recently composed their differences after being at odds over the question for a long time.

Guffey, however, described as "folly" a provision in the Copeland measure for Federal aid up to 50 per cent of the cost of ship construction, topped with additional financial aid for operation.

The Pennsylvania Senator's bill would place the maximum aid at 33 1-3 per cent. However, it would provide that at any time when private capital would not help finance a new line, the Government could put up the entire amount and operate the system.

Col. John M. Johnson, assistant Secretary of Commerce, assailed the Guffey bill as an avenue to Government ownership. He warned that if "you can't pass the (Copeland) bill, you will probably get Government ownership without camouflage."

Ocean Mail Contracts.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, demanded to know if the legislation would "permit the Government to be robbed to the same extent it was robbed by the ocean mail contracts."

Johnson replied that it did not matter "how much legislation" was written, the success of the subsidy program would depend on its administration by the Shipping Board authorities.

"Our experience in that respect," observed Clark, "has been extremely unfortunate."

Karl A. Crowley, Postoffice Department solicitor, estimated $150,000,000 is still due shipowners on the ocean mail contracts negotiated in 1928. He told the committee only 10 per cent of that sum represented the actual cost of carrying the mail.

Spokesmen for shipping interests will be heard today.

Court of Claims Told U. S. Must Settle in Gold

By the Associated Press.

Gold measures of the Roosevelt Administration were termed unconstitutional and in bad faith in the Court of Claims yesterday by Robert A. Taft, son of the late President and Chief Justice.

Taft, put forward by the regular Ohio Republican organization as favorite son entry for the Republican Presidential nomination, argued that the Government's promise to pay in gold, or its equivalent, was binding in more than $8,800,000,000 Government bonds which have been called by this Administration.

James W. Morris, assistant Attorney General, who opposed Taft, said Taft was asking the court to enforce a "pound of flesh" provision in the gold clause obligations that was not in them.

Both attorney's quoted the Supreme Court's gold case decision of more than a year ago, contending it supported their respective arguments.

A decision by the Claims Court is possible within the next few weeks. Appeals from it are direct to the Supreme Court.

Taft's case was the first of 42 gold suits pending in the Claims Court—special tribunal to try suits against the Government—to reach oral argument. All were filed after the Supreme Court's gold rulings and before the January 1 deadline fixed by Congress for filing these claims.

The Dixie Terminal Corporation, of Cincinnati, which Taft represented, presented a $50 Liberty bond containing the gold clause and demanding payment in gold or its equivalent ($1.69 for each dollar).

When this was refused Taft presented an interest coupon that matured in the six months after the call date. Payment on this also was refused because the Treasury held interest ceased when bonds were called.

Taft told the Claims Court that the Supreme Court had ruled the Government could not ignore the gold clause in its own obligations.

The Government now, he argued, contended it "can deliberately call gold bonds, not intending to pay them in gold, and still intending to obtain all the benefits of paying in gold by shutting off interest."

This, he said, was ignoring the Supreme Court ruling and evidence of "bad faith."

Morris, also quoting the Supreme Court, argued that it had said it would be a futile gesture to pay bonds in gold and then seize the same gold and pay for it in ordinary currency, or money.

The Government contended Taft acquired the bond in order to bring suit. It added that a litigant should not be allowed "to purchase a suit against the United States" and contended Taft had not proved he "suffered any injury whatever" through nonpayment in gold.

'Caution' Is Order To Austria Press

Vienna, March 9 (AP).—The strictly regulated Austrian press today received orders from the government chancellery not to express an opinion unfriendly to Germany.

The order came on the heels of the return of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice chancellor, from Italy where he visited Premier Mussolini.

Starhemberg's own newspaper, the Oesterreichische Zeitung, said:

"Clemenceau's unforgiveable mistake in decreeing that one part of the world should march under full armament while another should remain defenseless is the fundamental reason for the German decision to renounce the Locarno Treaty."

Foreign diplomats expressed the belief that an understanding between Germany and Italy may have been reached.

New Attack Made On Florida Canal

By the Associated Press.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican, Michigan) yesterday launched a new attack on the Florida ship canal and the Passamoquoddy tidal power project with an assertion that they were "economically unjustified."

His views were directed to Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee on the War Department bill where a $29,000,000 item is under consideration for continuing the two projects started by Executive order with allotments of Works Progress funds.

Recalling that he had already expressed his views to the committee in opposition to the Florida ship canal, Vandenberg made public a letter bringing the "Quoddy" project under fire as "in the same category."

Capper Views D. C. Hospital For Tubercular

Senator Condemns Upshur Street Institution's Congestion.

With public health items sharply reduced in the 1937 District supply bill that has passed the House, the campaign for adequate appropriations now veers to the Senate. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best public health conveniences in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs. ... ...

By Gerald G. Gross.

Overcrowding and lack of adequate personnel and equipment at the Upshur Street Tuberculosis Hospital were deprecated yesterday by Senator Arthur Capper following an inspection tour through the institution.

Eager to see for himself the handicaps borne by Tuberculosis Hospital as a resule of paltry appropriations, the ranking Republican on the Senate District Committee and ex officio member of the Appropriations Committee, observed conditions there in company with Superintendent J. W. Peabody, Dr. A. C. Leonardo, resident physician, and the writer.

The Blanton House sub-committee, which trimmed public health and hospital allotments in the 1937 supply bill, did not visit the Health Department or any of the municipal hospitals, either individually or collectively.

With the shrunken bill now in the hands of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Capper was the second Senator directly concerned with it to go on a hospital inspection tour in the last few days. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, accepted The Post reporter's invitation to visit Gallinger Hospital last Saturday.

Blanton Didn't Accept.

The same invitation was extended to Representative Thomas L. Blanton while his sub-committee was conducting hearings on the District fiscal measure but it was not accepted.

Once again the role of ferreting newspaperman—he is a former reporter and city editor and is still active as a Kansas publisher—Senato Capper was visibly moved by the congestion of patients' beds in the Upshur street institution.

Dr. Peabody told him crowded conditions have persisted for the last 20 years, that the hospital is under-staffed in practically all departments—physicians, nurses and clerks especially.

Needs Not Described.

The superintendent testified before the Blanton committee, but received no opportunity to describe the hospital's pressing needs.

Senator Capper shook his head sadly when certain ward patients, whom the doctors said should be in private or semi-private rooms because of their serious condition, were pointed out to him.

He gave close attention as Dr. Leonardo explained that the hospital dentist has no dental chair and lacks over necessary equipment. The Senator wanted to know if the number of physicians and nurses is adequate and was told at least one more resident physician should be added, along with as many nurses as could be obtained.

The inspection tour included all wards, the cramped office in which one woman employe serves as secretary, information clerk, bookkeeper and switchboard operator, the pneumothorax room and various other departments.

Condemns Congestion.

While Capper wa srestrained in discussing how strong a part he intends to take in restoring items elimiated by the House, he was emphatic in condemnation of the hospital's congestion.

The Blanton committee cut $20,500 from the appropriation recommended by the Budget Bureau for Tuberculosis Hospital and the new Glenn Dale Sanatorium. The latter, now under construction, is scheduled to be ready and occupied sometime after January 1, 1937, when the Upshur street institution will be abandoned.

The civic campaign to have the hospital kept open indefinitely after the opening of Glenn Dale Adult Sanatorium met with failure when the House sub-committee concurred in the Budget Bureau's denial of funds to maintain the institution through June 30, 1937.

Trimming the Budget Bureau's estimates, the Blanton group reduced "personal services" items by $15,500 and eliminated $5,000 from the $80,000 estimate for furniture and equipment for the new sanatorium.

Members of the Senate have been finding out for themselves the District health needs in view of House acceptance of Representative Blanton's budget cuts. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee, is shown (center) as he toured the Tuberculosis Hospital with Dr. A. C. Leonardo, resident physician (left) and Dr. J. W. Peabody, hospital superintendent.

Court Convenes In Disbarment Of Jesse C. Duke

Lawyer Found Guilty of 'Unethical Conduct' in Preferring Charges.

In a decision written by three of the Justices of the United States Court of Appeals, an d concurred in substantially by the two remaining justices in separate opinions, the disbarment of Jesse C. Duke as a member of the Bar of the District was sustained yesterday.

The Appellate Court held that Duke's conduct in prosecuting an appeal for liquor law violators amounted to "professional misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and * * * we agree that it merited disbarment."

Duke has charged Justice F. Dickinson Letts and United States Attorney Leo A. Rover, since resigned, with sending up to the Appellate Court a "false, deleted, diluted, inaccurate and incomplete" bill of exceptions, in the appeal he was pressing. He also sought impeachment proceedings in the House of Representatives.

Tried by a three-judge court, Duke was found guilty of unethical conduct in preferring charges which, in the eyes of the Court of Appeals, he failed to substantiate. He was ordered, at one stage of the appeal, to furnish the Appellate Court with specific instances in which there had been omissions from the bill of exceptions, and, according to that court, he failed.

In concurring separate opinions, Justice D. Lawrence Groner pointed out that Duke had charged all the justices of the Court of Appeals with personal bias and prejudice, and he wrote the "making of the charge and its repeated reiteration is, in my opinion, unprofessional conduct of an aggravated nature, and, as the lower court found, most reprehensible. In the other concurring opinion, Justice Harold Stephens said, "Deliberate, persistent and unfounded attack upon the integrity of the court and its officials is conduct which, in my view, unfits the person guilty thereof for continued membership in the bar."

Each Puff Less Acid
A LIGHT SMOKE
OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.

Luckies are less acid

Recent chemical tests show* that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.

Doctors Urged To Co-operate With Dentists

Five State Clinic Speakers Stress Collaboration in Diagnosis.

The need for closer co-operation between physicians and detnists, especially in diagnoses, was emphasized by speakers yesterday at the first scientific session of the four-day meeting of the Five-State Postgraduate Clinic at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Dr. E. C. Rosenow, of the Mayo Foundation, credited with isolating the poliomyelitis germ and with develping the newest serum used in treating the disease, was the first to address the thousand or more detnists assembled from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

The noted research worker, who, with Dr. F. Billings, discovered in 1912 that infection at the ends of the matism and other systemic diseases, roots of teeth causes arthritis, rheu said he is convinced all dead teeth should be removed. Physicians, he added, are usually more in sympathy than detnists with this belief.

"Ten years ago 12 per cent of the dentists agreed with me," said the head o fthe Mayo experimental bacteriological clinic. "Now 90 per cent of them think as I do about pulpless teeth. When the detnists get back o fthe idea 100 per cent we will have fewer systemic diseases."

Plates as Dentures.

Dr. Rosenow believes one way to convert the general public to an appreciatoin of false teeth is to refer gested the use of psychology in conto plates as dentures. He also sugvincing dentists that all dead teeth should be extracted. The detnists should be persuaded that they are artists with an opportunity to beautify the mouth, and that they build restorations instead of doing mere bridgework.

Dr. Joseph E. Schaefer, assistant professor of oral surgery at Northwestern University, who holds degrees in both dentistry and medicine, was less vehement in the drive for extractions.

"We all know of dozens of cases in which the extracting of teeth has not relieved systemic diseases," he declared. "We also know dentists sometimes hesitate to pull teeth which they have recently filled, even though the patient's physician may recommend that the mouth be cleaned out."

The solution for this problem, according to Dr. Schafer, lies in a joint clinic for dental and medical students. He also believes consultations betwen physicians and dentists would benefit patients.

Nutrition Agency.

Dr. William P. urphy urged members of the dental and medical professions to form an agency which would correlate factors in nutrition, hince nutrition plays a vital part in the health of teeth.

He declared that meat is necessary for the building of one and muscle, and pointed out that women who starve themselves in order to become slender are likely to begin wearing false teeth several years sooner than of they had eaten well-balanced meals.

According to a survey made at the University of innesota of 10,000 adult mouths, women lose their teeth at an earlier age than men, Dr. urphy said. Twenty per cent of the women were toothles by the time they reached the age of 40, while only 13 per cent of the men studied had suffered a similar fate.

Although he is convinced nutrition and the welfare of teeth are closely related, Dr. Murphy agreed with Dr. Schafer that there are some people in the world who can break all the health and diet rules and still have perfect teeth. On the other hand, there are persons who develop one cavity after another, no matter how carefully they obey all rulse.

"It's just one of those things," said both men.

Jaw Bone Identification.

Dr. Clarence O. Simpson, of the Washington University School of Dentistry, at St. Louis, developer of the theory that the jaw bone is an infallible means of identification, urged the dentists to learn more about X-ray and radiography. He declared he would rather see an X-ray photograph than the patient, providing the photograph had been made correctly.

"The X-ray reveals decay a year or more before it is found with instruments, and foretells pyorrhea about ten years before the 'pink toothbrush' stage," he said.

Dr. Simpson deplored the candy habit, because of the damage it does to teeth. Chewing gum in moderation after meals is beneficial, he said, since it removes food debris, strengthens the attachment of the teeth, and stimulates the gums. He laughed at the extravagant claims made by manufacturer s of mouth washes, and said any germicide strong enough to kill bacteria would injure the gums and other parts of the mouth.

Excessive smoking, according to Dr. Simpson, has no effect upon the teeth, but contributes to pyorrhea and cancer.

None of the speakers at yesterday's session of the clinic mentioned the Hartman desensitizer, which created a sensation when it was announced a few months ago.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

Sustaining Fund Campaign for $100,000 Is Near Quarter Mark.

National Symphony Orchestra campaign workers after the first four days of their drive for a $100,000 sustaining fund are near the first quarter mark.

Reporting at a luncheon yesterday in the Carlton Hotel committee chairmen had a total of $23,000 in contributions to support next year's National Symphony concerts.

Mrs. Emory Land, speaking for the Navy Committee, reported $116.25 in new donations, bringing the Navy's campaign total to $500. Donations to the symphony turned in at the luncheon varied in amount from $12 received by the Sporting Chance Committee to $8,527 collected by members of the Metropolitan Committee, which contacts the regular patrons of the Orchestra.

Miss Anne Hull, head of the piano department at Greenwich House, in New York, was a guest at Monday's luncheon. Miss Hull, in a short talk to the volunteers, lauded the National Symphony for the progress it has made in the five years of its history.

Organization of a large educational committee to solicit contributions in Washington's public and private schools and in the universities here was completed yesterday. The committee is headed by Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington University, and Grace Dunham Guest, assistant curator of the Freer Art Gallery.

Frontier police and mobile guards questioned every person as to the reason for wanting to enter France, searched all travelers thoroughly and subjected their baggage to minute examination.

Rhythm Orchestra for Youth Aids Symphony Appreciation

Even before they are old enough to carry a tune on a violin, horn or other instrument, boys and girls in school today learn the rudiments of symphony music in rhythm orchestras, and look forward to the day when they can play in a big symphony.

Older pupils at Potomac School, one of Washington's private educational institutions, are among the hundreds of young listeners who attend the National Symphony Orchestra's student programs. But for their schoolmates who are too small to go to the concerts, there is the Potomac Rhythm Orchestra. Miss Elizabeth J. Harris, music instructor at the school, is the director—sometimes. And then sometimes a boy or girl in the orchestra steps up and takes the baton.

"We don't wait until the children are old enough to really understand serious music to start them on the road to appreciation," said Miss Harris.

In the Rhythm Orchestra the young players, working with cymbals, triangles and tambourines, learn how to keep time to music, and that is the first step to musicianship. Miss Harris says it is also the first step to appreciation, because the children soon want to play the melody as well as beat the time.

"Of course, when the boys and girls get just a little older we can tell them the stories of the composers and of the music," Miss Harris explained. "They certainly like the story of Siegfried killing the dragon, and the other episodes of the drama on which Wagner based his operas of "The Ring."

"Then, after they have the story, they want to hear the music. The National Symphony Orchestra, in its students' concerts, have given the boys and girls an excellent opportunity to hear much of the music."

Miss Harris reported that many pupils of her school attend not only the students' concerts but also those on Sunday afternoons in Constitution Hall.

Hirota Cabinet Set Up by Japan As Crisis Ends

Emperor Attends Rites; New Premier Compromises Militarists.

Tokyo, March 9. (AP).—A new Japanese Government replacing one broken up by assassins' bullets 12 days ago was formally installed tonight in a ceremony in the imperial palace.

Emperor Hirohito attended the installation of Koki Hirota and the men he picked to aid him.

In turn, they promised reforms in military education to prevent such uprisings as that of February 26, when soldiers killed four Government leaders.

The cabinet includes representatives of both major parties, the Minseito and the Seiyukai.

Other ministers named were: War, Count Juichi Terauchi; navy, Admiral Osami Nagano; finance, Eiichi Baba; supreme court chief justice, Raisaburo Hayashi; justice, Raisaburo Hayashi, the chief justice of the supreme court; agriculture and forestry, Toshio Shimada; commerce and industry, Takukichi Kawasaki; communications, Keikichi Tanomogi; railways, Yonezo Maeda; colonies, Hidejiro Nagata, former Tokyo Mayor.

Col. Shunk Dies Of Heart Attack

Col. William Shunk, 78, U. S. A., retired, died yesterday from a heart attack in the lobby of the Cairo Hotel.

A native of Westville, Ind., Col. Shunk entered West Point in 1875. Later attached to the Eighth Cavalry, he rose rapidly through the ranks. Graduating with honors from the Infantry-Cavalry School in 1887, he left the Army War College in 1912, with the rank of colonel. Nine years later he was retired.

Col. Shunk received service medals for his part in the Indian Wars, Philippine War, Spanish War and World War, and for his activity in Cuba, 1899-1901, and in Alabama, 1916.

Col. Shunk's wife died several years ago.

Boy She Aided to See Thanks Mrs. McLean

An epilogue to a "miracle" mentioned by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean in "Father Struck It Rich" was written yesterday in Woodward & Lothrop's book department.

Back in the days of the World War, Mrs. McLean, visiting a local hospital, saw a small boy on a bench, crying. She learned that he had lost the sight of one eye and had undergone 13 operations on the other. She engaged Dr. William H. Wilmer, noted specialist, who restored the youngster's sight.

"Why, you are John," Mrs McLean cried delightedly.

'Blind Pig' Raid Lands 18 in Jail

A call that someone had been shot in a basement in the 3200 block of Prospect avenue northwest led to the arrest of 6 white men, 11 colored men and a colored woman who were drinking in an alleged "blind pig" last night.

Walter Butler, 41, colored, of 3248 Prospect avenue northwest, alleged operator of the place, was booked at the Seventh Precinct for possession of five gallons of untaxed whisky and disorderly conduct. The others were booked on charges of disorderly conduct.

When police arrived at the scene of the fake shooting, they said, Butler already had poured about 15 gallons of the illegal "booze" on the basement floor.

Jack Dempsey's Child Guarded By U. S. Agents

Hoover Investigates Plot to Kidnap Ex-Fighter's Baby in N. J.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 9.—the 19-month-old daughter of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, was guarded by Federal agents, city detectives and an armed attendant today as the Federal Department of Justice investigated a purported kidnap threat.

Dempsey disclosed that J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Justice Department's Bureau of Investigation, had telephoned him not to be alarmed and to let the department "do all the worrying."

The former champion professed not to be unduly concerned, but unusual precautions were taken to protect Joan Hannah, the object of the reported kidnap threats.

An armed private guard accompanied the child and nurse on a brief boardwalk stroll. They were trailed by a city detective. At the Dempseys' hotel a Federal agent was on the alert for "suspicious characters."

Two postcards, mailed anonymously in Atlantic City last Friday night, reported the alleged abduction plot. The writer of the cards, who addressed them to a newspaper editor and to Detective Capt. Harry Yates, said he had overheard "two Polish gentlemen" discussing kidnap plans on a New York-Atlantic City train.

Promptly notifying the Department of Justice, Dempsey kept news of the kidnap "tip" from his wife, who is expecting another child, until today.

He said she was not frightened when he told her but urged that every possible precaution be taken to safeguard their little girl.

Behzad In Washington.

An unusual opportunity is to be given Washingtonians through the four public lectures on Persian painting by Eustache de Lorey. The series opens, at the Freer Gallery, tomorrow afternoon.

As to the lecturer's qualifications, a better instructor in this popularly neglected subject would be difficult to discover. What the American Byzantine Institute is doing for the interior restoration of the Great Church of the Holy Wisdom in Constantinople, M. de Lorey, of the French Institute of Arts and Archaeology, has largely accomplished for the magnificent eighth-century Church of St. John the Baptist at Damascus.

He has devoted other years to research into purely Persian culture; to a study of Firdausi, the subject of his opening lecture; of the heritage of Islam and the Mongol invasion; of the Persian miniature painting of the fifteenth century and of Behzad and the Persian Renaissance. He may yet remove all the centuries' dust and debris from the ruins of the Sassanian civilization.

And the subjects of his lectures are not so exotic as they may seem at first glance. Here in the Occident, there is probably no phase of art concerning which less is generally known than the art of the Nearer East—yet it is more and more affecting western artists. The Byzantine revival now touches our best painters, sculptors, architects—but the average admirer of those craftsmen receives the result in ignorance of its origin.

Those forces that once followed the sun out of Persia are today warming America, however subtly. Many will welcome a unique chance to learn of them as they once flourished in the land where they were born.

Dr. Sizoo's Call.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo has made too deep an impression on Washington for congratulations to be entirely joyous at the news of his call to New York. He has been one of the most popular ministers of the city—and deservedly so. As a pastor he has been particularly distinguished for his demonstrations of how present-day realism can be (and, in truth, must be) made to harmonize with the deep idealism of Christianity.

Success in this, which is made all the more certain by the number of young people who have flocked about him, has been enhanced by the broad perspective obtained from his extensive travels and his exhaustive studies. The constant demand for Dr. Sizoo's presence as a speaker, not only in the city but over the country at large, testifies to the effectiveness with which he habitually presents a fine balance of wisdom and experience. Only last year he was one of 17 American clergymen selected to visit Great Britain and France in a good-will interchange of preachers.

Not to be able, on Sunday mornings, to hear his inspiring voice, charmingly edged with the faintest trace of a French Huguenot ancestry, will be a loss for many Washingtonians. May his congregation be as fortunate in obtaining a successor as the great Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas has been in finally prevailing upon Dr. Sizoo to accept the high honor its pulpit offers.

Jean Patou.

Jean Patou's entrance and exit as a designer were both obscured by an emphasis upon uniforms completely at variance with his highly individualistic costumes. In 1914, his debut into the world of fashion was overshadowed by the outbreak of war. And now his death, while still on the sunny side of fifty, is again subordinated to troop movements, which are a somber background for a creator of party dresses. Yet, ironically, he was a man who delighted in the spectacular and who was always good copy.

Patou's costumes, modeled on informal lines, came as a welcome relief to a post-war generation of women fed up with the stilted and ornate fashions of earlier couturiers. It was he who first catered to that intriguing aspect of feminine psychology which demands that a dress look inexpensive while costing a fortune. To Patou also goes credit for being the first foreign dressmaker to employ models from this country. He did this, he explained, because American women formed the bulk of his fashion clientele in Paris. That this should be so remains a strange commentary on a country that prides itself on leadership, independence, creative ability and isolation from Europe.

Patou, blaming the depression, filed notice of bankruptcy in July. He left a clear field to the Lanvins, the Chanels, the Schiaparellis. In January, as a final gesture, he made his last announcement of styles which included, as always, one sensational model. But Jean Patou's name, despite his occasional flare-ups in behalf of eccentric models, was mainly responsible for the simplicity dominant in women's fashions today. A true artist, he knew the value of the unbroken line in composition. And for all his concern with femininity he was masculine enough to have a good war record, and to resent tinted fingernails in no uncertain manner.

Time For A Peace Conference.

Since the close of the first World War there has been a constant struggle between the elements endeavoring to introduce a measure of law and justice into international relations, and those content to place reliance in the traditional method of unrestricted force. For some years the first school of thought seemed to hold a precarious advantage; of late the second school has been progressively dominant. It is not accidental that the growing reliance upon force has coincided with increasing expectation of a second world war.

Hitler's action in sending troops into the demilitarized Rhineland, thereby violating both the Treaty of Versailles and the Locarno mutual guarantee pact, is the latest illustration of the triumph of military strength over legal procedure. But the real significance of the event would be missed if this brusque challenge to peace were regarded as an isolated act of defiance. The mere fact that the presence of German troops along the German Rhine is illegal indicates that here is only one link in the sorry chain of blunders which leads back to the misnamed peace conference of 1919.

The Treaty of Versailles, unquestionably justified in many of its punitive clauses, was foredoomed by one intolerable mistake. It attempted to keep Germany in permanent and humiliated subjection to her conquerors. Timeless restrictions on the national armament, on the right to erect defenses and station troops on parts of German soil, were without precedent in history. It is entirely possible utterly to destroy a nation by a treaty of peace. But only on one condition is it possible to impose interminable restrictions upon a sovereign nation which is too strong to have its national identity wiped out.

That essential condition is a mutual acceptance of the commitments in the first instance exacted from the defeated nation alone. Such commitments with regard to disarmament were accepted—but never fulfilled—by the victorious parties to the Treaty of Versailles. There was no similar qualification of mutual demilitarization in the Locarno treaties But the subsequent action of France in bordering the disarmed German frontier with a continuous line of forts was certainly at variance with the spirit of conciliation which Locarno sought.

Since 1918, French policy has been shaped on the premise that Germany is not to be trusted. To debate the original justice of that assumption is now so much waste of breath. The inevitable outcome of the French attitude has been to create exactly what it feared. Whatever may have been the case in the days of the liberal German Republic, there is certainly no reason why France should now trust the Third Reich. Hitler, who is so largely a product of French pressure upon the defeated German people, undoubtedly confirms the worst fears of Clemenceau. But Paris has cried wolf so long that the rest of the world is today disposed to shrug its shoulders.

Confronted with the complete and irretrievable collapse of her post-war diplomacy towards Germany, France must now choose between two broad lines of policy. She can conceivably attempt to invoke immediate penalties against Germany. But since her individual strength is insufficient, to follow this course the Quai d'Orsay must compromise and bargain with Great Britain, with Italy, with Russia, and with the Little Entente. This means a pitiful decrease in French influence and prestige. The suppliant for assistance is never in a strong bargaining position.

Conversely France may decide, after the inevitable period of recriminations, to let bygones be bygones. Since there is no promising alternative the Sarraut government may decide to accept Hitler's conciliatory suggestions at face value, and to work with him instead of against him in an effort to stabilize Europe. Such a course would be a complete volte face for France. But to a people who have always regarded themselves as shrewd political realists it may well seem at the present time the only rational policy. And if Great Britain, holding the scales, urges this alternative, its reluctant adoption in Paris will be the more probable.

Since the Treaty of Versailles was signed the application of force has produced counter-force until today the continent of Europe, bowed down by staggering armaments, stands again on the very brink of disaster. In such circumstances a clean break with the past appears as the only possible solution of the problem.

A peace conference, between equals, in advance of another war, may mean the difference between destruction and salvation for European civilization. For such a conference the machinery of the League of Nations, already invoked by France as an essential step in seeking solution of the crisis, would be invaluable.

A Persuasive Appeal.

President Roosevelt's appeal to railway management and labor to "work together for a common end" is persuasive and sound. It is to the obvious interest of both parties to reduce the cost and improve the quality of railway services. If organized labor consistently opposes plans to eliminate duplicate facilities, or effect other economies that result in loss of jobs, the industry will be hopelessly handicapped in its efforts to meet competition from other transportation agencies. If the roads do not progress, they will, as the President says, retrogress.

On numerous occasions Co-ordinator Eastman has pointed out that labor itself will be the greatest sufferer from an obstinate resistance to improved methods of operation. If the railways fail to regain lost passenger and freight business, many workers will be deprived of employment, however successfully they may fight the introduction of labor-saving plans to cut operating costs. At the same time, the pace of progress ought to be adjusted to allow time for adjustments.

In other words, necessary reforms must not be carried out with ruthless disregard for the hardships inflicted upon workers who have become superfluous. Co-ordinator Eastman, therefore, strongly advocates some form of dismissal compensation, especially for the protection of older employes who have given faithful service for a long time. Regular provision of this sort is not only justified by humanitarian consideration, but would increase the morale of railway labor and add to its efficiency.

The President's letter, which is in substance an indorsement of Mr. Eastman's views, is also inferentially a strong indictment of the Wheeler-Crosser bill. That measure, designed to protect rail labor against loss of jobs due to the execution of economy programs, would confer extensive and dubiously constitutional powers upon the I. C. C. to disapprove proposed unification or consolidation plans.

Obviously the problems that confront the roads at this time call for flexible agreements by friendly negotiation. As the President says, legislation is "a remedy to be taken with great caution, or it may prove worse than the disease." At any rate, if a regulatory measure is desirable, it should take the form of an indorsement of what labor and managements are able and willing to do to further their mutual interests in the future welfare of the roads. We have had more than enough of the kind of bureaucratic dictation that is the antithesis of reasonable regulation.

It is rather ironical that an emphatic warning against legislation restricting the freedom of action of the railways in their dealings with labor should come from an Executive who has heartily indorsed the Wagner labor act and the Guffey coal act. However, the inconsistency of the President's professions does not in the least weaken the force of his present defense of negotiation.

What Mr. Eastman has aptly called "collective statesmanship" is undoubtedly needed to solve the problems of the railways. They cannot be met by obstructionist labor tactics which aim to salvage jobs by impeding progress. Nor can they be effectively settled by reactionary managements that lack the vision and courage to make present sacrifices in the common interest for the sake of future benefits.

If organized labor wants to preserve its freedom to bargain, and if private management wishes to be saved from Government ownership, both labor and capital will do well to heed the President's advice and settle their differences by agreement, instead of fighting them out in the "battlegrounds of Congress and the courts."

Calling A Bluff.

The eagerness of Representative Boland, the House Democratic whip, to bring the Frazier-Lemke bill to a vote shows that Father Coughlin's taunts have stung the victims of his barbed shafts to action. But his efforts have not brought the kind of success upon which the radio priest evidently counted. Instead of a weak capitulation in face of charges that Administration supporters fear the results of a vote, Representative Boland says he has yielded to a desire to "call the bluff" of the inflationists.

This change of tactics is not only the best possible way in which to test the validity of the Coughlin charges, but it is an excellent method of procedure whenever absurd and exaggerated claims are made regarding the extent of support for unsound measures. The suddenness with which the House turned against the Townsend pension plan and ordered an inquiry into the propaganda methods employed by leaders of that movement shows that legislative indorsement is not to be had for every mad plan that appeals to the cupidity of special groups or catches the popular fancy.

It is especially encouraging to find that responsible members of the House are now prepared to welcome a test that might once have been dangerous. That change in sentiment is strong evidence that inflationary sentiment is waning, as well as an indication that demagogues are far from being as potent as their fan mail sometimes leads them to believe.

Advice to Republicans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The advice may be new and obviously it will not be taken, but Republicans could make history for the Nation and for themselves not to offer a candidate this year.

General business conditions throughout the country are much better. In fact, business is on the continued upswing toward what appears to be normal recovery. The fact remains, however, that between 10 and 15 millions of people are still unemployed, thousands of businesses, large and small, still prostrated, the relief load practically the same as it was six months ago, and above all, social and financial tasks facing the national Government that cannot be evaded or avoided during the next four years.

Before the invalidation of the AAA and the passing of the bill to pay soldiers cash and bonds for their adjusted service certificates, there were high hopes of no new taxes. The President had already told Congress that new taxes would not be advisable at this time. When the AAA was knocked out and a determined Congress decided to settle up with the World War soldiers, the whole picture was changed

We are becoming tax conscious, and as such, every taxpayer is demanding that national purse strings be tightened. For those who are depending upon next November's election to remain in office, the game is becoming precarious. The country is demanding that the boys face the music.

If the Republicans were to wage a relentless campaign in the interest of their principles but offer no candidate, the gains would be beneficial to the party for the next 50 years. If the Republicans should inherit control of national affairs next November, it would be safe to say that they would go out of office four years later to remain out for many years. No man in the Republican party, except through political aspirations, could reasonably desire President Roosevelt's job for the next few years. G. B. R.

Prosperity Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Obviously there is no easy way out of the difficulties besetting our generation. There is, however, an honest way out and it is the way to a better and more deserved prosperity than we have ever known.

May I suggest:

That we abolish all expenditures not met by funds taxed out of the generation acquiescing in the expenditure.

That we pay out of a new sales tax on some universal necessity, as rapidly as possible, the public debt wrongly set up by this and the previous generation against those to come after us.

That we eliminate unemployment either by retiring all females from commercial employment on an income raised by taxation of the wages of all employed males (the number of employed females corresponds roughly in each decade to the number of unemployed males), or by reducing the hours and wages of all of us who are employed to the extent necessary to provide productive work for all unemployed.

Why Communism Grows.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The impossible situation in District affairs in Congress which has actually made "dictatorship" a fact, shows clearly why communism is growing. When one Congressman can ride rough-shod over 21 members of the District Committee of the House and make a zero of the lady Chairwoman, Mrs. Norton, it shows a weakness, a fundamental weakness of our governmental machinery.

If health, education and other essential social services are to be sabotaged by the megalomania of one Congressman whose ego has been ruffled by the medical fraternity, it indicates clearly the necessity for a decided change in our government structure. If we are to have a one-man dictatorship and that individual has a small-town conception of how Washington should be run, it seems preferable to me to adopt a more intelligent dictatorship; say a dictatorship of the proletariat. I am not fully convinced that the latter is in all respects satisfactory, but neither is the present existing dictatorship.

However, if the people of the District can be waked up and by a series of protest mass meetings attract national attention to the curse that has fallen on the Nation's Capital, perhaps the day can be saved for democracy. But I doubt if the D. C. citizens can be sufficiently aroused, and what will happen, I predict, is that Our Fuehrer will gum up the works to such an extent that a dictatorship of the proletariat will seem the least of evils.

Least of all do I blame Mr. Blanton. He is only taking advantage of a weakness in our existing governmental structure. I blame the people of the District and Congress for tolerating such conditions. I blame the present Democratic Administration for not checking such undemocratic activity. The leaders of the party could easily change this rotten situation.

Brook Farm Today.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One who is quite sympathetic with the spirit of Mary O'Connor Newell's letter on "The Attack on Our Liberties" would like to correct her on two statements of fact. She speaks of "survival of the spirit of Salem witch-burning days." No witch was ever burned at Salem!

She has in mind the Brook Farm "experiment in communism," fathered by Emerson and Alcott. Their interest in it was distant and benevolent. Its communistic features, after Fourier, were introduced by Albert Brisbane, father of the present Arthur Brisbane.

Brook Farm, incidentally, is still a going concern, across one corner of which the new superhighway from Boston to Providence cuts. It is farmed by the boys of a German orphan asylum. Margaret Fuller's cottage stands on its hillock as of yore, but the surrounding woods have been cut for enlargement of a Jewish cemetery.

John Spargo's Cry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Saturday, last, a New York newspaper published a letter from that great liberal, John Spargo, about "the unspeakable infamy of the mass seizure of telegraphic correspondence by the Senate lobby investigating committee." This constitutes a clarion call to the manhood of the United States Senate.

John Spargo is no spokesman for plutocratic greed or entrenched privilege. But he is foremost among those whose voice has been heard for years, as it is now, against the abridgement of great natural rights.

Such a cry from such a man ought to awaken in the United States Senate a real response, for it cannot be true that that body's membership will tolerate the ravishment of one of the most sacred guarantees of free men.

CALVIN F. THOMAS.

A Southern Nurse Speaks Out.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not see why, if Mr. Blanton is so eagar and anxious to fight the medical profession and hospitals, he doesn't attack the Southern States. I am Southern-born and Southern-reared and later lived in the District of Columbia for nine years.

And I know by experience and observation that the free medical services rendered in the District of Columbia by city and private hospitals, physicians and free clinics, are far superior to the full pay and part pay services found in the South.

Please let me say that this is not intended as a "slam" at the South, for the Southern communities do not have the financial means to support these clinics and free hospitals. But it is also a fact that surprisingly few cities and towns in the South have adequate hospital facilities for their indigent ill; and with few exceptions such things as free clinics are nonexistent.

I am a graduate of Gallinger, and as to the allegation that the nurses there are so overworked that they are very susceptible to tuberculosis—it is ridiculously false! I know well the superintendent of the hospital and the superintendent of nurses (who were there in the same capacities while I was a student) and I am very sure that no hospital could take better care of its nurses, unless it might be some very expensive and exclusive institution. Compare conditions there with that in two hospitals in the South that I know about, in one—as reported to me by an employe of that institution—the nurses work 12 to 14 hours every day in the week with no half day off and even no free time on Sunday! And their living quarters were a disgrace.

The most essential difference between the hospitals of the District of Columbia and some Southern hospitals is that in the South the nurses are shown some consideration but the the patients receive inadequate or very little care. In one hospital with which I am acquainted in the South it is "too much work" for the nurses to bathe patients every day or to give P. M. care, or to follow proper technic when giving treatments. These nurses "must have their free hours" and must not do any cleaning regardless of how much time they have at leisure while on duty—the hospital must stay dirty, even patient's rooms and wards, unless their is a maid or orderly available for the work of dusting beds, furniture, etc.

I was anxious to return to the South, I love the South and love working with Southern people. But I do believe, that except in unusual circumstances, the patients do not receive the care and attention here that they do in the majority of hospitals of the East and North. I am making this statement public because I am anxious to have all Southern hospitals wake up and try to elevate their standards and to try and give better care to their patients.

I have no malice aforethought and I hope no one will think that I am trying to discredit our lovely Southland as such. But I believe that the interests of the people should be aroused to the need for free clinics, better hospitals and a higher standard of medical care in the South. The public should use their influence with their representatives in Congress and in the State Legislatures to provide the necessary means for their establishment, support and control.

Methinks the Lone Star ranger should begin cleaning up his own territory before starting in on that of someone else. I believe, that with the possible exception of North Carolina, there is no State in the South which can compare with the District of Columbia in the number of well-staffed free clinics for the most needy type of patient. And the success in North Carolina is due to a large extent to the aid of the Duke endowment.

I am asking that other true and loyal Southerners, before condemning the writer of this letter, investigate their own communities and see if any free clinics exist, how they are equipped and staffed and to what extent the standards in their clinics and hospitals conform to those considered good in the rest of the United States.

What would you do? We recently had a patient who did not require institutional care but really needed treatment from a mental hygiene clinic—and we found that there is not one in this entire State!

The Post Impressionist

'It Was Eight Bells Ringing.'

Post Office, Tuesday.

WILLIAM CABOT DRAKE—

He ought to be an old salt.

Not solely because of his name: There's another reason, which we shall disclose presently.

Capt. William Cabot Drake has called our wandering attention to a phrase that we ventured, a few days since, to drop in this columnar well of English undefiled. We wrote of a certain educator in a Washington high school:

"It was two years ago that she started teaching music-appreciation."

The Captain signaled us:

"Will you tell me why you say 'It was two years ago that she started teaching music-appreciation' instead of 'Two years ago she started teaching music-appreciation?'"

* * *

Loath to commit ourselves in writing, we called the Captain to the telephone. We whispered:

"It was for emphasis that we used the phrase."

* * *

But our seafaring friend snapped back:

"I don't agree with you. It's bad style."

* * *

So we are driven to writing, after all.

* * *

Duly sworn, and qualified as expert witnesses, the following persons are presented on behalf of our defense that the questioned phrase is permissible:

Shakespeare	Percy	Junius
Burns	Buchanan	Saxe
Dickens	Coleridge	Gilbert
Longfellow	Burke	Tennyson
Holmes	Poe	Macauley
Dana		Godkin

* * *

"'Twas on the shores that round our coast
From Deal to Ramsgate span
That I met alone, on a piece of stone,
An elderly naval man."

* * *

Or, if the Captain is inclined to take that as too personal, here's Buchanan:

"'Twas the body of Judas Iscariot Lay in the Field of Blood."

* * *

And now the phrase as a time-fixer. We omit Southey and old Kaspar's "Summer evening," however: we're a bit tired of it.

* * *

Burns doesn't say "In the charming Month of May" and so get on with the rest of it. He says:

"It was the charming month of May."

Likewise Alfred, Lord Tennyson:

"It was the time when lilacs blow.
And clouds are highest up in air,
(That) Lord Ronald brought a lily-white doe
To give his cousin, Lady Clare."

* * *

Or Neighbor Poe, of Baltimore:

"It was many and many a year ago
In a kingdom by the sea,
That a maiden lived whom you may know.
By the name of Annabel Lee."

Plus T. B. Macaulay, whose initials didn't indicate the state of his health, but stood for Thomas Babington:

"It was about the noon of a glorious day in June

* * *

Next, take the phrase as a vehicle for identification. Percy, of course, is merely recording an old ballad when he sets forth:

"It was a friar in orders grey Walked out to tell his beads."

But John Godfery Saxe, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow spoke out of their own mouths:

"It was six men of Idostan,
To learning much inclined,
Who went to see the Elephant. . ."

"It was a tall young oysterman lived by the riverside . . ."

"It was the schooner Hesperus
That sailed the wintry sea."
To end which list we append merely Shakespeare;

"It was a lover and his lass,
That o'er the green cornfield did pass."

* * *

Do we hear Capt. Drake complaining that those quotations are all from verse? Let him hear Edmund Burke: "And it was a twelve month later that you reversed it." And Dickens: "It was ten years ago that he had seen him last." These weren't journalists? Well, these emphatically were:

Junius: "It was in the October of last year that I first approached this subject." Lawrence Godkin: "It was only last year that this happened." Charles A. Dana: "It was in 1873 that the Governor did this."

* * *

We wish there were a copy of Earle's "English Prose" in our office, but, there being none, we shall invite the Captain around to consult Goold Brown's "Grammar of Grammars."

* * *

"It was an ancient Mariner
And he stoppeth one of three!"

* * *

Now do you see the other reason for our saying that friend Drake ought to be an old salt?

Getting Around

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Hither and Yon

UP IN New England, last stronghold of rugged individualism, tourists are always amused by the roadside signs. A friend of mine, who not long ago motored through that region, complained bitterly because, he said, it seemed as if the town fathers assumed that everyone knew how to get around and needed no signpost instructions. But, while the lack of directions irritated this braw Westerner, the erudition of such signs as he did see amused him.

Coming as he did from Utah, where adverbs are at a premium, he was no end fascinated by the insistence of those in charge of such matters in generally painting "Go Slowly" instead of the more imperative—and effective—"Slow."

It is true that grammatical didactitude finds its way into the highway commissions of New England, but it seems to me that for complete erudition, or academic stuffiness, the sign painters at the Zoo in the National Capital take some kind of a record.

Even in Boston's Franklin Park you would not find a new and prosaic elephant house being referred to as it is out just beyond Harvard street. The sign there reads:

"New Exhibition Hall for Pachyderms . . ."

Now, I ask you.

CAPT. BERNARD THOMPSON, newly appointed chief of Washington detectives, is a cop of the old school. He is tough and even hardboiled. And while he has never been heard to say he doesn't like newspapermen, he likewise has never been known to refer to them in loving terms.

One time I was trying to get some information about certain ancient police cases of which the District police were none too proud, mainly because they had failed to solve them. They took me in to see Mr. Thompson, then acting chief. I found out readily enough why they smiled when they left me there.

Chief Thompson is a taciturn fellow, who sits and smokes his pipe, and lets the other fellow do all the talking. He actually dislikes publicity. He hates it most when he is working on a case. He really believes that crooks read the papers and that they may find something therein which will tip them off to the activity of "the law."

He spent much of the hour I was with him recalling how, in certain cases, he had given the reporters the run-around. He thinks that what the police do is their own business. But he has a sense of fairness. The story he was telling had to do with a round-up of a vicious gang. He and his men had spent the night on their trail, taking one in here and another in there, and they thought they had been unobserved. They were chagrined when, at the end of their night's work, a certain reporter showed up, right on their heels, with the whole story of the affair.

Capt. Thompson was pretty sore, but there wasn't anything he could do about it, and later he congratulated the reporter for his ability. He likes men who know their jobs and go ahead and do them with the least fuss. But he thinks reporters are hired to find out things and that it is not the cop's duty to help them. Before they made him chief of detectives he intimated that he "might loosen up a bit." But the reporters who cover headquarters say he hasn't. In fact, since his elevation they have nicknamed him "Lockjaw" Thompson.

Instead of being sore about the name he seems to be proud of it.

A STORY is going the rounds about a junior partner of one of the firms which has come under the scrutiny of the Black lobbying committee. He is quite worried. It seems that the committee went to a telegraph office and seized a lot of telegrams charged to his company and in them were a mass of private messages. The custom of the firm was for all partners to settle up at the end of the month for such telegrams as had nothing to do with the firm's business. This gentleman always had a large monthly bill.

What is worrying him the most, the gossips say, is that the majority of his telegrams were sent to a certain lady with whom it might be embarrassing for him to be publicly associated. Seems he learned his style from "Daddy" Browning and, while it is not known to what extremes of the ludicrous he went, it is said that he was not above indulging in a certain amount of baby talk in his messages. And, although he has no nieces, he always signed himself "Uncle."

This gentleman is having some very uneasy days. He is deathly afraid that the committee will read them into the record and then make him stand up and swear that they were not code messages to some naughty lobbyist trying to get the Wheeler-Rayburn bill squelched. If they do read them, he'll be the one who is squelched, his friends say.

France Again Puts Ban On All Military News

Paris, March 9 (AP).—France placed a censorship on military news today after eight months of complete press freedom. Newspapers published news of troop movements, but government telegraphers, who handle all communications to the exterior, were instructed to "refer" to authorities any military information.

Britain Warns Hitler on War; Conciliatory Stand Shocks Paris

first speech in Commons since his resignation as foreign secretary after the collapse of the Franco-British scheme for settlement of the African war, said he believed Germany's action was a blunder.

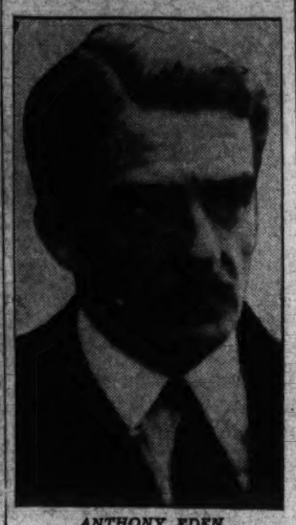
"I believe it shakes the whole foundation of international agreements," Hoare said.

Foreign ambassadors and ministers filled the diplomatic gallery. Eden read from a prepared statement which the cabinet had previously approved.

He disclosed that Friday he had invited the German Ambassador to discuss a western air pact and that the following day the ambassador handed him a memorandum stating that Germany believed the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact destroyed the Locarno Treaty and that Germany consequently felt herself no longer bound by the pact.

"The abrogation of the Locarno Treaty and the occupation of the demilitarized zone have profoundly shaken confidence in any engagement in which the government of Germany may enter in the future," Eden declared.

"There could be no one in this House or this country who would seek to condone or excuse such a step. It strikes a severe blow at that principle of the sanctity of treaties which underlies the whole structure of international relations. There is no reason to suppose, I am thankful to say, that the present German action implies the threat of hostilities. The German government speaks in the memorandum of 'their unchangeable longing for real pacification of Europe.'"



ANTHONY EDEN.

This citation of the German phrase produced laughter.

Baldwin asked Parliament to approve the new program for building up Britain's defenses and said "our preparations are preparations in case needs should arise."

"Neither the government nor the British people will be intimidated by threats from whatever quarter they come."

The prime minister said the government planned "to keep calm, to keep our heads and to continue to try and bring France and Germany together in friendship with ourselves."

Baldwin said Britain is still the greatest naval power of Europe.

Bid to Attend Locarno Parley Sent to Berlin

Sanctions Against Germany Unlikely; Opinion Is Divided at Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, March 9.—The League of Nations formally invited Germany tonight to participate in a meeting of the council Friday to examine the Franco-Belgian appeal against Berlin's violation of the Locarno Treaty.

The speech of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to the British House of Commons created the impression here that League sanctions against Germany are unlikely.

Some circles said Premier Mussolini would demand cancellation of the sanctions now in force against Italy as a condition to pursuing African peace negotiations. Italy Saturday accepted the League's appeal for such negotiations

Send Text to Berlin.

The League communicated the text of the French appeal to Germany and concluded:

"The president of the council proposes that the council should meet in Geneva Friday, March 13, at 11 a. m.

"Should the German government, as a contracting party to the treaty mentioned above, wish to partake in the examination of this question by the council, I should be grateful if you would inform me."

The message was signed by Dr. Joseph A. M. C. Avenol, secretary-general of the league, a Frenchman.

Opinion as to whether the League Council can decree sanctions against Germany, as it has against Italy, was divided in Geneva tonight.

Some officials hold that France has not appealed under any article of the covenant imposing sanctions and that the appeal merely concerns signatories of the Locarno Treaty.

General Sanction.

Other officials think the council could recommend general League sanction. This could be done, they said, by:

1. Declaring Germany's denunciation a threat to international peace.

2. By acting under the council's resolution of 1935, which condemned Germany's violation of the Treaty of Versailles after France called Germany's act a "threat to international order."

The Council at that time appointed a committee which drafted economic and financial measures to be employed against nations "which endanger peace by repudiating international obligations."

An economic boycott and a financial embargo were suggested by the committee, but these measures were never applied.

When the League imposed sanctions against Italy it was guided largely by the conclusions of this committee.

Italians Resume Ethiopian War On All Fronts

By the Associated Press.

Asmara, Eritrea, March 9.—Italian troops resumed offensive operations on all Ethiopian fronts today after a one-day suspension.

Italian officers had announced the halting of offensive movements at 8 a. m. yesterday, to await developments on the League of Nations' recommendatons for peace talks, accepted "in principle" by Italy and without reservation by Ethiopia.

Observers though the suspension of hostilities was an effort to ease the European peace problem at a troublesome moment, following Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland and denunciaton of the Locarno Pact.

(An official announcement at Addis Ababa today said Ethiopia, regardless of Italy's action, "will continue the defensive war until peace negotiations begin on a definite basis."

Italian Troops Move.

Italian troops were moving forward today throughout the northern battle section, clearing the Tembien region, where scattered bands of Ethiopians still remained, and penetrating beyond Amba Alaji, which the Fascists reached in their most recent advance.

The high command stressed the fact that no armistice had been declared. (The message was censored at this point, and some of the material apparently was deleted.)

After a day of celebrations by the soldiers, who had felt that peace was near, the Italian armies returned to their military duties.

Fascist airplanes were said to be flying far into Ethiopian territory.

Italo-German Pact.

Rome, March 9 (AP).—Italy and Germany signed a treaty today, giving mutual recognition to civil and juridicial codes of their countries.

The agreement was initialed by Premier Mussolini and Ulrich von Hassell, the German Ambassador.

Despite reports that Berlin and Rome are seeking a rapprochement in the current European crisis, officials said the meeting was limited to this point.

Italian diplomats turned their attention from Ethiopia to the Rhineland tonight, as they sought to define their official position in the Locarno Treaty controversy.

French, Belgian and Yugoslavian ambassadors called on Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, and Vittorio Cerruti, Italian Ambassador to France, made preparations to discuss the Rhine question with Locarno signatories at Paris tomorrow.

About London

By Edward Acheson.

State Of The Realm.

London.

TO "have a question asked in Parliament" is the step which in England follows "writing a letter to the Times about it." Recently the crop of questions in Parliament has been diverse, to say the least. Three were particularly enlightening. The first concerned the growing use of railroad parcel rooms as depositories for dismembered bodies. And were the police doing anything about it? The second dealt with the apparently ingrained habit among deliverymen of losing large packages of poisons; this was brought to a head by one carter who managed to misplace a dose sufficient to put a quietus on 50,000 people.

The third perhaps shows the condition of the realm in the most interesting light. It concerned itself with the fascination a number of citizens had demonstrated for hurling themselves under subway trains. The minister of transport pointed out, in reply, that said hurling in the future wasn't going to get citizens where they wanted to go, because of the current construction of "suicide pits" between the rails. By this ingenious device numberless unwanted lives were salvaged for their owners, since prospective suicides found themselves sitting in a trench gazing up at the under-carriage of the car above. Besides its effect on vital statistics, this system prevents hold-ups in service, the minister explained.

But apparently he was unaware of a third improvement which the "pits" had made possible—a marked increase in the rating efficiency of subway station cats. Daily at the Praed street underground horrified squeals from waiting passengers greet a calico cat, by name "Splinters," as he comes casually wandering down the track in the very jaws of on-rushing death. But "Splinters" bids fair to reach a ripe old age, thanks to the "pits" which both he and his confrere (the larger stations retain two cats) invariably use en route from one hunting ground to another. Furthermore there is, apparently, no record of a subway cat getting ordinary rails confused with live ones.

THE British have always laid impious hands on the French language, but usually the purloined words have been redecorated to an extent which makes the theft almost impossible to trace. The Belvoir pack of hounds, for instance, is pronounced "Beaver." Beauchamp is "Beecham" and the famous "Rotten Row" is derived from Route de Roi. Pubs have been especially culpable, the Bag o' Nails was originally the "Bagatelle;" the Elephant and Castle, "L'Enfant de Castile." But it's a poor game that doesn't work both ways. The French are beginning to fight back: the most hopeful sign to date is the Gallic name for "Camp Fire Girls:" they're called "Filles Boyscouts."

THE Ipswich County Court got itself a jolt the other day when an 18-year-old boy was unable to pronounce the words of the oath. This roused the judge who demanded, "Haven't you ever heard of Almighty God?" The boy said, "No."

His Honor: "Have you been to school?"

"Yes."

"Who taught you about religion?"

"A bloke."

"Didn't he teach you who God was?"

"No."

England, although officially shocked, is wondering how much better his honor could have done faced by the same direct questions.

from the Rhine, were called up to the river.

Germans Prepared.

Cologne, Germany, March 9 (AP).—Foreign residents said tonight that Adolf Hitler's Rhine army, despite appearances to the contrary, had marched in well prepared to defend itself if necessary.

Army officers were quoted as saying this was necessary for tactical reasons because the possibility of a French or a Belgian attack as a result of the reoccupation could not be overlooked, however remote it might be.

The actual strength of the army was believed by these sources to be nearer 30,000 than 20,000. Big guns supposed to have been moved in during the night were carefully concealed. Only very light anti-aircraft and artillery guns have been shown to the people.

Merchants Delighted.

Heavy artillery was reported brought to Cologne at dawn Sunday and taken to prewar fortifications on the rim of the city.

The British blew up heavy-gun emplacements of these forts when their army of occupation withdrew. Two sections of the fort, near the airport northeast of the city, have been fitted out for aviators.

Cologne so far has one squadron of small biplane fighters.

Regardless of the heavy or light guns, one thing was certain: Merchants and hotel keepers are elated with what Reichsfuehrer Hitler has done. They say it is an old axiom that a garrison always brings business.

The old soldiers in evidence in the larger cities were officers dashing about in automobiles. Everybody was waiting for an expected visit by Hitler.

New Army Acts By Reich Stir Fear in Europe

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Berlin, March 9.—Germany, awaiting the outcome of the diplomatic furore resulting from her scuttling the Locarno Pact, today made further military moves, which caused consternation abroad.

Garrison police forces in the Rhineland were incorporated in the army.

The Official Gazette published a decree by Minister of the Interior Wilhelm Frick, elaborating earlier laws calling upon Germans residing abroad for military service in Germany.

Invitation Transmitted.

Meanwhile there was no indication whether Germany would accept the invitation transmitted today to attend the League of Nations Council meeting Friday.

Rhineland orders, issued at Cologne, provide that the German police, in effect, are infantrymen. Their full strength has not been ascertained, but it was certain they would reinforce the army considerably.

While the incorporation order applies only to garrisoned police, it was believed that already 5,000 Rhineland police have been incorporated into the army.

The incorporation explains the disproportion between artillery and infantrymen moved in at such places as Duesseldorf, where only artillery and air force detachments marched in, without infantry.

Military Parade.

The military parade went on unabated in the Rhineland.

Two pursuit squadrons of nine planes arrived at the old Rebstock Airport, from the direction of Kitzingen-am-Main.

The Frick decree requires that Germans born in 1914, 1915 and 1916 must report to German consular officers abroad.

Those born in 1914 and 1915 will not be required to do labor service, but they may serve in the army after October 1, 1936. The decree says that those born in 1916 may be required to do labor service from April 1, 1936, to September 30, 1937, and military service after October 1, 1937.

In addition, those born between 1911 and 1915 may volunteer to join the army after October 1, 1936. Those born between 1912 and 1919 may volunteer after October 1, 1937.

Germans Abroad.

Under earlier laws, all Germans living abroad were required to report to consular officers when eligible for army call, but they were exempted from actual service, if it incurred loss of their jobs.

A foreign office spokesman denied reports that Germany has unilaterally nationalized rivers internationalized by the Versailles Treaty. It had been reported Germany had renationalized the Rhine, Danube, Elbe, Oder and Moselle.

French Stand

As the diplomatic negotiations continued and increased their pace, heavy reinforcements of French troops flowed into the steel and concrete frontier posts along the eastern border.

Infantry, artillery and chasseurs moved into position along the Rhine from Strasbourg nearly to Basel while additional forces occupied strategic points along the western border of the re-occupied Rhine zone.

The Senate Foreign Affairs Committee adopted almost unanimously a report recommending ratification by the upper House of the Franco-Soviet mutual military assistance treaty. The Chamber of Deputies has already approved the pact.

Bank depositors in frontier towns rushed to take money out of the institutions with huge withdrawals being made at Metz, Mulhouse and Strasbourg.

The threat of war to oust the German troops from the Rhineland lessened after French officials declared they believed an outbreak of actual conflict to be impossible.

A new session of representatives of Locarno signatories was called at the Quay d'Orsay for tomorrow morning, where the official attitude of the other four nations subscribing to the pact will be reviewed in preparation for the League of Nations council session Friday.

Informed sources predicted that even Italy would side with France, although they forecast that Premier Mussolini would expect to "get something" for his support.

Premier Albert Sarraut, who is expected to outline the government's position in the Rhineland controversy before the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow, is expected to ask a vote of confidence for the official program.

Ministers said the premier looked forward to a big majority for the movement to "bury" party differences in the face of the present international crisis.

Flandin scored one victory when he obtained the Polish promise of support. The Polish Ambassador told the French foreign minister that Warsaw was worried over Hitler's "contempt" for treaties and was ready to return to France's camp after years of cool relations.

Vittorio Cerruti, Italian ambassador to Paris, again called on the French foreign minister to discuss further the problem of inducing the British to abandon sanctions against Italy so that Mussolini could rejoin his old allies.

French officials criticised the British declaration by Eden expressing a desire to negotiate new peace treaties with the Reichsfuehrer. They contrasted the British vigor in demanding sanctions against Italy with Eden's proposal for discussion of the new pact with the German leader.

Lewis Blames Rhine Rearming On Allies' War Debt Default

Hitler 'Pounced' Knowing U. S. Is Unconcerned, Senate Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Blame for the German reoccupation of the Rhine area was placed yesterday by Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, upon "the scorning by England and France of the just demands of the United States for payment of the (war) debts due."

Speaking in the Senate, the foreign relations committeeman declared:

"The sudden pouncing by Leader Hitler on the Rhine border and planting the aroused troops of war in the area in opposition to the Treaty of Versailles would not have taken place had Germany not seen that the American people were no longer concerned in the enforcement of the treaty—because of the scorning by England and France of the just demands of the United States for payment of the debts due.

"Germany saw that it was the United States that gave victory in war to these debtor nations—that now the people of the United States would not allow the Nation to enter into any punishment for violation of treaty—nor would the United States take any part in directions, counsel or confidence between the contestants.

"Had the United States been treated justly by the nations known as allies and these countries kept the good will of our Nation, Germany would not have taken any move adverse to England or France or of the Versailles Treaty.

"Germany would not have by such action risked the opposition of her friend, the United States—nor taken any action without consideration of the interest of America."

While official quarters maintained silence yesterday on the European crisis, there were indications some shared the belief of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, that Germany's abrogation of military restrictions "does not mean war."

Borah, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and now its ranking Republican member, voiced an opinion that the Versailles Treaty had to end.

"I do not believe we should put the war aspect on the moves of Germany," he said. "Of course, no one would wish to prophesy either way as to the result. But I have a strong feeling it does not mean war."

SENATOR LEWIS.

Redirection of European Interest Predicted in Quest of Materials.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

United States' determination not to pay costs of a possible new European war may compel a redirection of continental economic interest to South America, Asia, and Africa, and raise unprecedented problems of economic character, financial experts here predicted last night.

Numerous authorities were unanimously of the opinion that the combined effect of the Johnson act against loans to war-debt defaulters and the recent neutrality act forbidding loans to belligerents would be to establish a financial dyke between this country and warring nations of Europe through which only small streams of money might trickle.

Materials Ir Dominant Role.

This financial insularity of the United States, experts thought, would tend to make accessibility of materials rather than of funds the dominant aspect of European economic strategy.

Lacking the vast American credit resources available in the last World War, European belligerents would have to consider all possible means of obtaining foodstuffs, metals, fats, and other indispensables with the minimum outlay of actual cash.

In event of long war, this certainly would lead to a wide array of national programs for development of colonial resources, scientific substitution of inaccessible commodities, imports on long-term contracts, levies on home stocks, and possibly even international barter arrangements. Such arrangements naturally would be directed to countries having a relatively urgent interest in disposal of export commodities, as in South America and Asia.

Salient Aspects.

Salient aspects of international finance at outbreak of a new war would be as follows:

1. The tendency toward financial, as well as political "isolation" of the United States, accentuated by memory of $12,000,000,000 of past war debts in default.

2. The consequent inaccessibility to foreign belligerents of the United States gold holdings, last reported at $10,182,000,000.

3. The great French gold holdings of $4,324,000,000, giving her a "war chest" in excess of any other possible European combatant, with consequent greater immediate availability of foreign supplies, and broader opportunities for possible internal "inflation."

(4) The small gold reserves of Germany, reported in January at $31,000,000, but probably, in fact, supplemented by large and publicly unknown stores of metals and foreign funds.

(5) England's gold holdings in January were $1,652,000,000; her normal role in European war is that of banker for continental allies.

Internal Resources Issue.

As compared to the last great war, all European belligerents would be compelled to rely more heavily upon internal resources. With borrowing abroad notably handicapped each country would have to force the maximum possible services and contributions from its own nationals.

Requisition of foreign holdings of those nationals would be a logical prompt move. The last tabulation of United States international banking accounts, as of January 2, 1935, showed only $573,000,000 due to foreigners on deposits, short-term loans, investments and acceptance credits. This figure compared with $1,465,000,000 four years earlier.

Efforts of European governments to compel a return of individuals' funds to the homeland would be offset to some extent by the individuals' desires to find safety for their funds abroad. "Flight of capital" from warring countries is an ordinary phenomenon in time of threatened strife and during belligerency before complete restrictive measures can be established.

Japanese Aid a Factor.

All financial experts speculate on the possibility that credits or commerce through third countries might in some degree break down financial insularity of the United States. In the present state of public opinion here it is believed that the Government could and would thwart most such attempts.

There also is considerable speculation as to how far Japan might be able to assist a European combatant either with funds or extraordinary supplies. Japan's gold reserve at the end of 1935 was $425,000,000, the largest in Asia, and her capacity to produce textile and other war materials at extremely low manufacturing costs is proverbial.

France or England, it is surmised, would find means to forestall any extensive Japanese aid to Germany if such were attempted.

Wall Street's Cash and Faith Set on Peace

Only France and England Have Enough Gold for War, Is Belief.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 9.—Financial and commercial interests in Wall Street placed their faith and money today on European peace.

"No immediate war on the continent," is the current dominant opinion of bankers and brokers.

One of the foremost reasons for the peace attitude is the knowledge that only France and England have sufficient gold to finance the purchase of war materials in quantity.

With the reminder that the financial position of European powers may be concealed from the world, one authority declared concealment, if any, hid weakness—not strength.

A paucity of gold, it was asserted, paralleled a scarcity of essential raw materials in most countries.

America again could supply munitions, but commercial men asserted the lessons of the World War were too recently learned to permit of heavy sales to Europe on credit.

Action of the stock market today was, in the opinion of many observers, an argument for the peace contention when it broke suddenly by $1 to around $5 a share.

Americans have learned that a long war makes for industrial and business profits while it lasts, and many doubted that even recent neutrality legislation could change this fact.

For several months numerous traders have been operating on the possibilities of war either because of the Italian expedition in Ethiopia, the Russo-Japanese tension or the German attacks on world peace treaties.

But there are Wall Street authorities who are convinced the latest Hitler move was an exhibition of defiance to bolster Nazi pride only and was not intended as a gesture of aggression.

Breathless Senora de Pombo Charmed by Nation's Capital

By Dudley Harmon.

After a whirlwind pilgrimage of two days to the places most sightseers cover in two weeks, Senora de Pombo, young bride of the Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, says breathlessly but enthusiastically:

"I think Washington is lovely."

Since last Friday, when she arrived with her husband from her home in Mexico City, Senora de Pombo has visited Mount Vernon, the Capitol, the Library of Congress, the Washington Monument, the Folger Library and the Supreme Court.

"Unfortunately, the Supreme Court wasn't in session when we went," she said yesterday, "but I plan to go soon to see the justices in action."

"In Mexico City our government buildings are beautiful," she said, "but much smaller."

Senora de Pombo is the former Senorita Maria Teresa Cano. Her father is a well-known business man in Mexico City, where she has lived all her life, with the exception of a few years in Spain. She met her husband a little over a year ago, at a reception, while he was vacationing in the Mexican capital. Three weeks later they were engaged.

Her chief interests are reading and painting. Of all the literature she has read, she prefers the Spanish. However, she is looking forward to reading books in our language as soon as her English is better. She is taking English several times a week.

She studied painting at school, and has numerous landscapes in water color to her credit. As soon as warm weather comes, she plans to go to the countryside surrounding Washington to paint.

Except for a stay of four days in New York several years ago, this is Senora Pombo's first visit to the United States. She hasn't yet seen as much as she wants to here, and the place she is most anxious to visit is Hollywood. She and her husband are enthusiastic movie fans, partly because it helps her with her English.

"Although I've been here less than a week," said she yesterday, "I'm already impressed with the activity of American women. Is there anything they don't do, or aren't interested in? Their lives are a great contrast to ours at home, where no young girl goes out without her mamma."

Senor de Pombo is distantly related to the flying Don Juan, Ignacio Pombo, youthful aviator who made the headlines recently when he flew to Spain to snatch his fiancee from a convent.

Camden Show Will Attract Vacationers

Virginians Among Officers of Horse Racing Unit; Judge Chosen.

Northbound vacationers in Florida and the Bahamas will join the hunting crowd in Camden in the next week or so for the presentation of the twenty-sixth Camden Horse Show, which will be held March 19 and 20, with Mr. Lewis Waring, of Rumson, N. J., judging the events.

Officers of the Horse Show Association this year include some of the group of Virginians who organized an earlier show, one of them being the president, Mr. J. North King, of Warrenton, Va., an amateur racer and trainer, who spends the season in Camden and maintains a stringh of horses there.

Mrs. Carroll K. Bassett, another of the transplanted Virginians who is wintering in Camden, will serve the association as vice president. Mrs. Bassett leaves her farm near Warrenton and joins in the hunting which has made Camden a favorite haunt of the sporting set during the winter and early spring.

Mr. David R. Williams, of Tulsa, Okla., is another of the vice presidents arranging for the show. Miss Frances Thord-Gray, of Greenwich, Conn., is secretary-treasurer. Other members of the committee are Mr. Ralph Waldo Chase, of Midfield, Conn.; Mrs. C. P. DuBose, jr., of Camden; Mr. Harry D. Kirkover, of Geneseo, N. Y.; Mrs. Dwight Partridge, M. F. H., of Great Barrington, Mass., and Mr. Watson Pomeroy, of Millbrook, N. Y.

The show will be held on the grounds of the stables near the Springdale Course, over which the Washington Birthday races and the Carolina Cup races are run.

In the summer Camden is a sleepy little Southern town. After the season slows down in Virginia and Maryland most of the hunting set leaves for the South, taking its string of horses and setting up winter establishments in Camden.

The brown hills and natural pine-covered courses have attracted such sportsmen as Mr. Jock McLean, who has taken a house in Camden this winter with Mr. Henry Frost, of Middleburg, Va. From time to time Mrs. Marion du Pont Summerville leaves her home, Montpelier, once the home of James Madison and the scene of annual races, and comes to Camden for the events, in which many of her horses, known as among the best cross-country runners, have been entered.

Mrs. Peter Bostwick, wife of the polo player, has been wintering in Camden.

An absolutely unbiased discussion of the workings of the "New Deal" in Germany, based upon an extended trip through every important city in the country, and interviews with political, industrial, and financial leaders. Greatly increased interest in the political, cultural, economic, and social development of Germany, together with the impressiveness of her industrial activities, and the constant inspiration derived from her art, music, and literature, demands a true portrayal of present day conditions in this country.

Mr. Bucher's talk will be an effective and impartial presentation of facts relative to Germany to-day, facts gathered by a trained observer who has had unusual opportunities for investigation.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Honorable Laurence Morland, who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic young Englishwoman who calmly announces she is going with him. He tries to prevent her, their wills clash, she outwits him and he agrees. At a hotel in Lourenco Marques she receives a cable that distresses her. Instantly she recovers her impenetrable poise. They go aboard a ketch and Jo is ill from the stench, but she recovers. At Machiche they go ashore.

Chapter XVIII.

On Safari.

THEY shot ashore in a shallow skiff with lateen-rigged sails spread out like wings. Already the Jo-boys were landing by the scowful, leaping into water thigh high, all their possessions in a bundle on their heads. The typewriter slipped and plunged into the sea; never mind, it would still tick-a-tack as well as ever. Its owner fished it up with one foot, then scrambled ashore to join the race across the sands for the compound and breakfast.

Three Britishers in spotless white came forward to greet Ballard. "Hello, Mallory; the Chief wirelessed you were coming. Welcome back."

Ballard introduced Josephine so casually she felt like an appendage and was so received. Nobody was rude; there was merely an absence of emphasis which could be taken either for a form of courtesy or simply as recognition of Mallory's rights.

Feeling amused she trailed the four men to a large hut, cool inside, mosquito proofed, luxurious with tanned skins, wicker couches and Bombay chairs. In spite of the early hour, gin-and-tonic in long glasses with real ice was served. She shook her head in refusal and was given instead the chilly watery milk from a green cocoanut.

As she sipped she listened with all her ears. It was true she had not cared to be left behind either at the hotel or this morning on board, but loneliness had not been the major reason. If she was a growing puzzle to Ballard, so was he to her, though she had refrained from saying so. She watched him more than he knew and caught herself thinking about him so often it caused her a vague annoyance.

They talked of drought, famine and record heads; but finally, after a weighty pause, of porters and horses. Yes; everything was arranged; a start could be made as early on the morrow as he wished. The assurance seemed more than could have been expected, but Josephine's watchful eyes discovered in Ballard a sudden uneasiness. He who was usually so self-possessed, puffed rapidly at his calabash pipe, knocked it out and presently started to puff again, forgetting it was empty.

"I want to get off today," he stated.

"Today!" cried three shocked voices in unison.

Josephine Detains Mallory.

Ballard laughed nervously, "Listen, you chaps; you know it isn't as foolish as it sounds. Show me the man who has ever made an early start out of a compound."

"What of it?" testily asked MacIntosh, the eldest, thinking of the preparations he had made for a grand dinner. "Do you suppose all the game in Africa won't wait a beastly 12 hours?"

Ballard said no more in words. He sat in silence, not moving even to smoke or drink, his jaws closed, his eyes staring blankly. One and then another of his hosts arose and walked out. When the last was gone he stood up and started to follow.

"You've been horribly rude," said Josephine in a low tone of scorn mingled with anger.

He turned on her. "Have I?" he asked, coldly. "Whose fault is it? How many huts do you suppose they would have offered us?"

She felt a sinking sensation, as if the chair she sat on were slowly collapsing, but quickly recovered. "If that's all, why didn't you tell them the truth?"

"Inocent child, when the truth is accepted as truth everything is clear sailing. But in this instance, to tell what you or I think is the truth would be like poking a nest of hornets. Questions can sting through the thickest hide. They could raise the very devil with my plans and presumably with yours."

Before she could answer he was gone. She scrambled to her feet and reached the door in time to distinguish his striding figure. Hurrying out, she started after him across the huge inclosure where hundreds of recruits for the mines, as well as the returning Jo-boys, armed with pannikins, were forming in long lines for their morning meal. Since she was a woman, and alone, they cast jibes at her like firecrackers, each followed by a roar of laughter. Understanding nothing they said, she still colored angrily and was glad to catch up with Ballard as he was about to enter a minor inclosure.

"What were they saying?" she asked breathlessly.

"Something ribald, you may be sure; but you needn't ever be afraid. What protects you is that women are property and property is sacred, especially when it's worth four or five pounds."

"Is that all I'd bring?" she asked, so interestedly that he cast a glance at her, striving to discover mischief in her eyes and finding none.

"It depends on the locality," he answered. "Near the mines the only source of easy money, a wife is worth 40 pounds, but the price sinks to as low as 2 as you go north."

"I see," said Josephine. "I'm sorry about what I said back in the hut, though I'm getting tired of admitting I was wrong."

"Oh, that! Forget it. Do you want to look at the horses?"

"Rather!"

"I'll give you your pick."

Entering through a stockade behind which a dozen men and more than twice as many women were huddled, they crossed to a corner where the two horses were tethered. Their syces sat on their heels, gravely feeding their charges with wisps of fresh-cut grass. Of the horses, one was a speckled gray over 16 hands high and the other a stocky brown, slightly sway-backed. Noticing her hesitation, Ballard spoke first.

"I'll take the brown."

Ballard Reproved.

"I detest self-sacrificing people," said Josephine promptly; "you never know where they really stand. It's merely a question of weight for weight, so of course you'll ride the gray."

MacIntosh appeared beside them. "You have the best of it," he assured her; "the brown is full of go and like a cradle."

"What's his name?" she asked.

"Swayback, of course, and the other is called Pepper—short for Pepper and Salt." He turned to Mallory. "Here's Negrito, your capataz. He's a good one—the only really good boy I can get to go."

Ballard examined the man, black as ebony and straight as a ramrod, who was to be his safari foreman. Ballard spoke in Portuguese.

At the order Negrito became suddenly galvanized and uttered a loud howl. Instantly a hubbub arose—cries, protests, wails. Ali, Jocko and Achmed came up on the run. MacIntosh threw up his hands and started to turn away.

"Thanks, Mac," said Ballard. "Some day you'll forgive me for my beastly hurry."

"Who are all these people?" asked Josephine, confused.

"Our porters."

"So many to carry what two of us need?"

"You'll see."

During the next two hours she did. The tents with their poles, a fly and the kitchen tarpaulin made five loads; beds, bedding, lamps and lanterns three more. The inverted tables, one holding between the claws of its legs the bathtub filled with light miscellaneous articles, the other clasping a duffle bag, made two more. The chuck boxes, each containing provisions for a week, accounted for a dozen. Their personal baggage combined required five porters, and each horse was the sole care and burden of his syce.

The cook was entitled to a helper in addition to two carriers whose business it was to arrive first with his paraphernalia; it was always a race between them and the chair-bearer. Ballard's ammunition box was a full load; the medicine chest along with a bag containing small sundries but principally a large amount of money in minuscular denominations was another. Four porters carried rice which later would be supplanted by millet. Ballard's gun trunk, as yet unopened, completed the quota—40 porters, of whom over half were women, several of them with nursing babies strapped to their hips in addition to the loads on their heads.

New Coiffure Is Held to Cure Droopy Spirits

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONE WOMAN says that whenever she feels terribly blue and depressed she goes out and buys herself a new hat and this tonic never fails to perk her up.

On the other hand we know of a woman who vows and declares nothing is so good for droopy spirits as a brand-new coiffure.

But how few women will place themselves in a hairdresser's hands with utter confidence and let him transform them into new personalities. They usually try to direct the procedure with very mediocre results.

There's one hairdresser, however, who has recently come to a Connecticut avenue shop and certainly he's a genius at cutting and a past master at curling. He makes you feel that here's a hairdresser you can really trust.

If you want a new coiffure he can design one for you that suits exactly. He studies your face, your type and then he proceeds. It's amazing to see the transformations he has wrought on women you'd call dowdy until he gave them chic—all with a new coiffure.

However—if your hair cut suits you perfectly and you want some one who can cut it or curl it just as it is, he can do that, too.

If you want a hairdresser you can depend on then he's your man!

Rare Pajama Sale.

OPPORTUNITY is pounding your door down. He's trying his best to tell you that a certain store is having a sale it would be a pity for you to miss.

Furthermore, he says, if you're going to buy Sonny Boy any pajamas for the spring, now is the time. Due to the sale, perfectly elegant pairs of broadcloth pajamas (vat-dyed, incidentally) are reduced to 67 cents. They come in two-piece styles, middy or coat tops. In solid colors—blue, brown and tan. They range in size from 8 to 18.

Dapper Little Veskits.

THEY'RE downright dapper those little veskits. Have you seen them? If not, just drop by a G street shop and there they are. Crosses between blouses and vests. They're sleeveless and some have collars and some haven't. They fasten down the front and end there in a sort of inverted V. In the back they're gathered in by a little belt.

They're very chic with suits. One look will convince you of that. And they're modestly priced at $2.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Endrocine Glands.

WITHIN RECENT YEARS the entire field of medicine has witnessed many kaleidoscopic changes due to the growing recognition of the importance to body economy of the secretions of certain tiny bits of tissue, called the endocrine glands.

With the first demonstration of William Beaumont that the process of digestion was an orderly, systematic affair, came the realization that the body was, after all, but a huge chemical laboratory in which the circulation of the blood maintained equilibrium of all functions. We know that the secretions of the endocrines can perform prodigious feats. In the field of midwifery, for example, certain gland products regulate conception, control prenatal growth and determine the onset of labor. After the child is born the rate of progress depends upon their activity.

Every man, woman and child is or should be an individual—a personality. How does Jones differ from Smith and Smith from Brown? We recognize the role of inheritance and of environment, and we picture every individual as he appears to us—calm or excitable, deliberate or quick, lazy or industrious, phlegmatic or responsive, slovenly or neat—these factors and many others making up personality.

In scores of ways glands regulate our response to the demands for sudden effort and long sustained activity. Furthermore, they govern physical, mental, and sexual development. Certain types of headache, hot flashes, backache, disturbances of vision, dizziness, digestive upsets, and excess nervousness may all follow in the wake of gland difficulties.

Unfortunately, our knowledge of what to do in the event of a glandular deficiency has not advanced as rapidly as facts have become known concerning the behavior of these secretions. As our information increases, however, many more standardized procedures for supplying the substances that are lacking will become available.

Censorship Of Movies Up To the Parent

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"MAY I GO to the movies this afternoon, mother?"

"Have you much home work to do? Are you going alone? Well, it's raining, so you might as well."

The mother does not ask what picture the child wants to see. The chances are that the child herself does not know, and the mother has not noticed. It will amuse the youngster and keep her from harm.

But all movies are not suitable for children, and some which might do for 16-year-olds certainly are unsuitable for children of 10. In some places ordinances keep young children from attending the movies alone; others forbid certain pictures for anyone under an age limit. For the most part it is left to the parents to make the decision, and it is their duty to keep their children from pictures which are unsuitable for the immature.

There is no reason for censoring pictures until they are all fit for the young. To reduce the stage to the level of the moron seems a little hard on the adults. Tea and coffee, late hours, strong drink and cigarettes are not handed out to the children, so why not have a few amusements for the parents which the children by reason of their age cannot attend?

Parents may claim that the children do not understand; that most of what they see passes over their heads. This may be true of what children read, but not of what they both see and hear. It is amazing how much of what is projected on the screen they absorb and retain in their memories. Often what they do not understand at the moment haunts them until it is explained.

Movie houses should not be regarded as day nurseries. They are an important factor in the community, and should be treated with as much thought and respect as the school.

Expert Shows Young Couples How to Furnish Home for $500

Sponsors of "Economy Houses" Demonstrate How Four-Room Apartment Can Be Furnished if Each Saves $5 a Week for One Year Before Marriage.

"YES" is the answer of Economy House at 469 Fifth avenue, New York, to countless young couples who are asking "Can we afford to be married?"

"If two young persons can save $5 a week each for a year they can start housekeeping in an attractively furnished 4-room apartment with everything paid for," says Mrs. Charles E. Gregory, president of the Institute of Family Living, which established Economy House.

Mrs. Gregory's interest in arranging model homes arose when as chairman of the American Home Department of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, she sponsored the building of six houses throughout New York State. Economy House was established to encourage interest in home making on the part of prospective young married couples.

General Budget Rules.

In apportioning the $500 budget for Economy House, Mrs. Gregory and her assistants set aside $300 for the main furnishings, which had to be chosen both for their attractiveness and wearing qualities, $100 for unpainted furniture and $100 for the small things.

"There are three general rules to be followed in furnishing a home on a $500 budget" says Mrs. Gregory. "Buy the large pieces of furniture of good quality. Select in unpainted furniture the pieces that do not demand a surface such as would a table. Buy the small things at low prices.

Economy House contains a living room, bedroom, dining room, kitchen and bath. The living room has a mulberry broadloom rug, mulberry linen draperies and a pull-up chair upholstered in mulberry shade. A divan and overstuffed chair are upholstered in a material with a green background, tan figure and flecked in rose. At either end of the divan is an end table and in front of it a low coffee table. An electric mantel at one end of the room has "pin-it-up" lamps on the wall on each side. Per bookcases, stained mahogany color, stand at each side of a gate-legged table. In one corner of the room is a combination desk and telephone table. The pictures include several prints of masterpieces. Vases of flowers, an ash tray, an electric clock and other small articles give the room an atmosphere of home.

Home Furnishings.

The dining room has a table similar to that of the living room with four chairs. The set was bought unpainted. Other furnishings include a tea cart, and serving table, bought unpainted, Welsh dresser fern stand, gilt edged dishes and a rose colored glass supper set.

The bedroom is in blue and white with a double bed of white metal, candlewick spread in blue and white, two pillows, one pair of all wool blankets, one wool comfort and three pairs of sheet and pillow cases. The vanity dresser and chest of drawers are painted white, the dresser covered with white oilcloth, draped with a ruffled flounce. The triple mirror, which has a blue silk drapery was formed of three single mirrors attached at the back with adhesive tape and supported on triangular mirror bases. Other bedroom furnishings include a blue chintz boudoir chair, a small white fur rug beside the bed, a bedside table, a floor lamp and two "pin-it-up" lamps. Blue broadfelt carpet covers the floors of both the bedroom and dining room.

The kitchen is done in red and white with cheery red bowls, knife handles, tin containers and garbage can. Its white curtains have red dots. The equipment includes hammer, tacks and nails, cleaning mops and powders, an electric iron and little washboard.

Mrs. Gregory recommends a small washing machine, a vacuum cleaner and an electric sewing machine as the next electric equipment to be bought.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THERE ISN'T any formula for charm in a room . . . It's achieved in so many illusive ways. Some of the down-at-the-heel-est rooms ever have it, and some of the sleekest most correct and expensive rooms haven't. We know a woman who does her interior decorating almost entirely with flowers . . . and she works wonders with a bowl of red tulips, white roses in a blue bowl or a tall vase of pink gladioli. Another friend of ours brings out a mellowed, slightly shabby room with a collection of interesting brass kept gleaming all the time. Others depend on beautifully patterned fabrics or on finely detailed furniture.

And ever so many of us rely mostly on color. For instance, here's a lady with a lovely living room with canary yellow walls, plum carpet, draperies with a pale-blue pattern through them, a plum sofa, a pale-blue damask wing chair and a beige lounge chair . . . there is a white fur rug in front of the fireplace and an extra chair in dull old rose.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Few Crosses Harder to Bear, From Average Wife's Point of View, Than Husband Who Makes Public Spectacle of Himself Flirting With Waitresses.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband belongs to the class of men who seem to consider it necessary to flirt with, jolly and kid waitresses and other girls wherever he happens to eat, in order, so he says, to get the best attention and the choicest food. To my way of thinking the whole thing is very cheap and lacking good taste. So far, I have said little regarding the matter, except to refuse to dine with him.

* * * *

Not long ago, while in town, I met one of these waitresses on the street. Having known her for some time, I spoke to her pleasantly and would have continued on my way. But she stopped me and started in with a big story about my husband. I said practically nothing to her. But what she told me has made me wake up to the fact that people are talking and that I am the object of pity among friends and acquaintances. So far, I have said nothing to him about this matter. He would probably deny the whole thing and tell me I am jealous.

* * * *

We do not have any children and I've been considering leaving him. It seems foolish to break up without any explanation but I can't go on like this. I still love him but somehow the old trust and faith in him is gone. Do you think he realizes how he has humiliated me? I have no relatives in Washington and do not know just what is the best thing to do. Could you perhaps advise me? Thanking you, I am sincerely,

Mary Haworth.

MRS. E. L. T.

One of World's Worst Bores, His Name Is Legion.

DEAR MRS. E. L. T.: In circumstances such as you describe, the best thing to do is the common sense thing. If you are dependent upon your husband for support; if you are nearing middle age and have never been trained to make your own living, the better part of wisdom may be to adjust yourself as philosophically as possible to his cheap philandering. I must admit I can think of fewer crosses harder to bear—from the average wife's point of view—than a husband who makes a public spectacle of himself in any way. Yet anyone who habitually eats in public places has the testimony of his own eyes and ears to prove that the name of man is legion who habitually "flirts with, jollies and kids waitresses and other girls wherever he happens to eat." And, just as in your husband's case, the man who supposes such exhibitionistic conduct makes a hit with intelligent waitresses and other girls whose unpleasant business it is to serve him is only deceiving himself. For he is immediately spotted and classified as one of the worst bores it is the restaurateur's professional duty to deal with; the hardship he imposes on the waitress or cashier or hostess is second only to the humiliation he visits on his wife or other feminine guest.

* * * *

I'm sure your husband doesn't realize how much or in what way he has humiliated you; and very probably he would believe jealousy was the foundation for any request you might advance for more dignified behavior. Delicate nuances of conduct are incomprehensible to the exhibitionist. If he possessed the sensibility which makes for becoming conduct in public, he could read the chastening truth about his antics in the controlled enduring faces of those who must suffer him, however letter-perfect their compulsory performances of appreciation.

* * * *

Now, if you have reached the end of your wifely endurance and no longer trust or respect your husband, the forthright thing to do is to tell him so and tell him why. If you believe separation or divorce is the only tolerable solution of your situation you should be woman enough—in the sense of being adult enough—to acquaint your husband with that fact before you take such a definite step as leaving him. It's barely possible the situation is remediable. If he realizes he must revise his conduct or lose his wife, he may decide to forego his cheap and senseless flirtations. In the latter event, that love you say you still have for him may yet be rekindled into an emotion embodying a saving measure of respect for and trust in him.

* * * *

But, as I indicated in the beginning, reason rather than resentment and dissatisfaction should be employed in determining what is the right move to make.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

FEDERAL scientists, underpaid when compared with their colleagues in private industry, are among the most patriotic people in America. They are constantly introducing new devices for national defense and keep apace with the laboratories of foreign powers.

BAKER.

For instance, patents on four devices said to be of great military value have been issued in the past week to:

Max W. Fischer and Raymond L. Graumann, Washington Navy Yard, for a moisture-proof closure for pyrotechnic units, such as aircraft float lights.

John C. Goshorn (F), War, for an apparatus for filling gas mask canisters with granular chemicals in an evenly filled manner.

Wiley T. Moore (P), War, for a modification of the Browning automatic rifle, so it may be supplied with ammunition by a belt.

Paul P. Stoutenburgh (C), Justice, for an electrical method and apparatus for determining the force of gravity, employing radio equipment.

All Government employes are invited to participate in the duplicate pair games of the Federal Bridge League at 8 p. m. Thursday at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Sterling silver prizes will be awarded, according to Paul E. Golden (P), Bureau of Standards, league president.

The Office of Education, Interior, offers an opportunity for aspiring actors and singers to obtain training and experience in radio work under some of the best technicians in the industry. No funds are available for the artists' salary, but they will "gain valuable experience on programs which will go regularly over nation-wide hookups," and later the best talent may obtain contracts with private concerns. Offices of the project are in the Metropolitan Club, Seventeenth and H streets northwest. Applicants will be accepted through Thursday until 9:30 p. m. daily.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Fats Waller and his C. B. S. Orchestra and other acts; screen, Bing Crosby in "Anything Goes"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy in "Wife Versus Secretary"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Rose Marie").

What does the pedestrian
In Washington need?
Why, good nerves, of course,
And plenty of speed.

He must leap like a frog,
And run like a deer;
Have a long rubber neck,
And be without fear.

He must look to the right,
To the left, and behind;
Watch changing lights,
And not lose his mind.

Business Council to Meet.

George L. Berry, the President's industrial co-operation co-ordinator, has called his business-labor council to meet in Washington Thursday to receive, committee reports, which will embrace such topics as wages and hours, child labor and antitrust laws. The council is expected to recommend to President Roosevelt what measures, in its opinion, should be taken to promote industrial recovery.

ONE of the outstanding scientists in Government service, Dr. William A. Craft (P), formerly associate professor, animal industry department of the Oklahoma A. and M. College, has been appointed chief of the swine investigations of the Animal Husbandry Division, Bureau of Animal Industry.

CRAFT.

Dr. Craft was born in Jonesboro, Ark. He was graduated from the Iowa State College in 1922 and received his master's degree from the same college in 1923. In 1932 he received his Ph. D. from the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Craft is a member of the American Society of Animal Production Genetics Association, Oklahoma Academy of Science and American Association of Advisory Science. He is also a member of the Alpha Gamma Rio, Alpha Zeta, Phi Sigma and Sigma Xi fraternities.

WORKING his way up through the grades since his entry into the service August 8, 1913, Allen M. Laster (F), has just been sworn in as chief of the printing and binding section, administrative division, Internal Revenue. He was chief of the duplicating section eight years and was appointed assistant chief of the printing and binding section in 1927.

LASTER.

Mr. Laster's promotion was the occasion of a little ceremony when his fellow workers gathered for a tribute and presented him with a basket of flowers. Frederick L. Evans, chief of Administrative division, complimented Mr. Laster on his efficient service.

Mr. Laster was secretary of the Alabama State Society several years and is prominent in employe activities.

Cyril H. Collett, chief of forms and publications subsection, has been promoted to assistant chief of the printing and binding section. Mr. Collett has been with Internal Revenue for 29 years.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Treasury, and Senator William Gibbs McAdoo will speak at the reception and dance to be held by the D. C. division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, beginning at 8:30 p. m. today at the Willard Hotel.

Organization Gains Reported.

Extraordinary organization activity in New York and Florida is reported at the national offices here of the American Federation of Government Employes. E. Claude Babcock, president, returned yesterday from New York, where he met with representatives of the Association of Workers in Public Relief Agencies and reported an agreement whereby this group of approximately 7,000 employes will join the A. F. G. E.

Meanwhile, 24 lodges of Federal workers have been organized in Florida and have applied for charters. It is expected that six more Florida lodges will soon apply for A. F. G. E. charters, all members in the new units being employes of WPA, PWA and FHA.

On the Air Today

A NEW field of opportunity is opening up for the Washingtonian (and he must be enormous, collectively speaking) who craves an opportunity to break into radio.

The Office of Education, of the Department of Interior, is searching for radio talent to supplement the staff of WPA relief workers now working on the organization's projects.

In traditional fashion, auditions will be held today, Wednesday and Thursday, from 7 to 9:30 p. m. at the Education Radio Project studios, Metropolitan Club, Seventeenth and P streets northwest. Men women and children of all ages who can sing or emote, are eligible. Each applicant is requested to bring material along—that is, music or "cuttings" from plays.

Those found acceptable will be admitted to a radio stock company now being developed by the project.

Maurice Lowell, production manager of the project, now on leave of absence from N. B. C.'s Chicago offices, and Rudolph Schramm, Washington musician, are in charge of the auditions. No money is available for those accepted for the stock company—but valuable training and all the opportunity in the world are offered by the directors. Actors and singers will be coached by Messrs. Lowell and Schramm.

During the next few months a number of programs will be produced which will be aired on Nation-wide networks.

Helen Ault, who won the talent search audition here last night, will appear shortly with Paul Whiteman, it was learned yesterday.

Haunted House: "Crime Clues," attempts to outdo British haunted house airing, from Hilltop Manor, Staten Island, WMAL, at 8.

Viennese music: Dominates Sigmund Romberg's program, WRC, at 10. (Strauss and Lehar compositions.)

Frank Munn: Sings, Speaks' "Sylvia" (Munn has been called the best interpreter of the famous song by its composer), "Lavender and Old Lace," WJSV, at 8.

Lawrence Tibbett: Introduces a new song by Johnny Green, WJSV, at 8:30, entitled "The Night Is Beginning."

* * *

The "Crime Clues" haunted house broadcast was inspired by a ghost broadcast from England, scheduled for 3 this afternoon. It will come by short wave and may be heard through WMAL. It seems a walled-up cellar of the "spook" house, which has been closed for centuries, will be opened and nobody knows what will emerge. Not to be outdone by the British Broadcasting Corporation, the "Crime Clues" folks decided to find a haunted house and a broadcast of their own. That, as noted above, is set for 8 tonight.

Two contributions of the air will be made today in behalf of the National Symphony Orchestra. Radio Joe devote his WMAL half-hour (7:30) to the symphony's drive for funds, presenting Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe and Harold N. March. At 4:40, John O'Rourke speaks from WJSV.

Culbertson on Bridge

Cause and Effect.

Few contract bridge players, even in the expert class, realize the significance of even a slight change in their bidding habits. To alter the requirements for a single bid may affect the entire structure of bidding, from opening one-bids to grand slams. For example, the minimum honor trick strength required for an opening suit bid was changed, in 1935, from two and a half honor tricks to three honor tricks. This seems simple, yet its effects were manifold. Many responses which previously had been only semiforcing (such as the one-over-one and the two no trump take-out) automatically became absolutely forcing.

Bridge players will find that the new "asking bid" which has had such an enthusiastic reception will be more than an addition to their bidding system It will react in hundreds of ways on all bids. Especially it will take the bidding of freaks and "swing hands" out of the classification of guesswork and give to slam bidders on these unbalanced types of hands an uncanny precision.

The "asking bid" makes it possible to obtain negative information without the need for drawing fine inferences which only the best players can be expected to draw. The following hand, played in a team-of-four match at Crockford's in New York, illustrates the use of the "asking bid" to avoid reaching a losing slam. It also shows how, in order to lay the groundwork for his "asking bid," a player first made a bid which, a short time ago, he never would have made.

♣ J 9 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠ A 9 7 5 3 2
♦ Q J 3
♣ K Q

The bidding (North-South vulnerable) would, before the introduction of "asking bids," have lured North and South into a losing small slam. In fact, the team-of-four which, in the match at which this hand was dealt, did not use the "asking bid" reached six spades and went down one. Their opponents, using "asking bids," stopped at five spades and made it, gaining 750 points.

Where the "asking bids" were not used, East, the dealer, passed. South bid one spade, West passed, and North bid three hearts. South bid three spades, and North four no trump. Now, when South bid five spades, North decided that the chances of South's having at least the diamond king were so great that he would risk a six spade bid. West opened the king and ace of diamonds and it was all over.

The other North-South pair used the "asking bids." South opened with one spade, as at the other table, but North, wishing to confirm the trump suit in order to make an "asking bid" later, gave him a jump raise to three spades. South bid four spades, which usually closes the bidding. Any further bid by North is considered a "trap."

In this case North gladly trapped. He bid five diamonds, an "asking bid," to find out whether or not South had the diamond king, or a singleton in diamonds. South, using the conventional sign-off, bid five spades to deny second-round control of diamonds; and North passed. When West took his two diamond tricks he was through for the day.

Tuesday is experts' day in Ely Culbertson's column. Write your bridge comments, suggestions and interesting hands to him, care of this paper. For questions, remember to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Blanton Balks Rent Measure By Filibuster

Chairman Norton Assails Texan for Tactics in House Speech.

Warns That Bill Will Be Called Up Again at a Later Date.

By James D. Secrest.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Washington landlord and enemy of organized labor, yesterday prevented a House vote on the Ellenbogen rent control bill, sponsored by local labor unions and Government employe organizations, by a filibuster that occupied the greater part of the afternoon session.

His tactics, which produced three roll-call votes and several quorum counts, brought upon himself one of the most severe tongue lashings of his career from Chairman Norton of the House District Committee, who was in charge of the bill.

The measure will be called up again on the next District day calendar two weeks from yesterday.

Charges that Washington real estate operators have organized a powerful lobby against the measure and have been exerting strong influence on certain members of the House were made by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, author of the bill, and Mrs. Norton.

Blanton Is Denounced.

The District Committee chairman also took occasion to denounce Blanton as a dictator by implication and to flay him for reducing appropriations for Washington hospitals and the Health Department.

"It is plainly evident that a few members in this House have misrepresented this bill to so great an extent that they have been successful in wasting almost the entire afternoon in filibustering to prevent this bill from coming up for consideration," Mrs. Norton said.

After pointing out that while she was not the author of the bill she believed every member of her committee is entitled to have his measure called up, she added:

"Of course, I am perfectly well aware that that does not mean anything to certain members of the House, but we have no dictator in our committee. We believe in fair play.

Bills Should Be Considered.

"We believe in allowing a bill to be considered on its merits. If it is the wish of the members of this House to vote down this bill, I can assure you that the committee will accept the decision, but I think every fair-minded member of the House is with me when I say that when the District of Columbia Committee reports bills to the House they should be considered fairly and on their merits. It so happens it is rather remarkable when this does happen.

"We have a very strange sort of government in the District. The people here pay taxes. They are not allowed to say how their money shall be spent; in fact, they are not allowed to say anything about what they want done in the District. They have to take what they can get.

"It would seem to me that this sort of day is one of the best arguments that could be brought forth for giving the District people the right to vote so that they may say for themselves what they want and bring into this House sufficient influence to have their bills considered fairly at least."

Complaints About Rents.

Exhibiting a handful of correspondence, which she said constituted complaints against high rents in Washington, Mrs. Norton said:

"I hold in my hand the correspondence which has come in during the last month from poor tenants who have not a voice in District affairs. These people have been gouged by certain real estate men in the District.

"I am not one bit in doubt as to what the reason is for the attitude of certain members of the House today. Of course, the real estate people of the District have a lot of influence. They have a lot of influence on members of the House, which is the reason this filibuster is going on. That is the reason the bill has not been permitted to be considered on its merits.

"I may say to the members that last year when this bill was brought up for consideration the same thing happened. But we decided at that time that we would wait a while and see whether or not the real estate people could and would themselves do something about this condition.

Hundreds Ask Relief.

"I asked them to consider the bill and to give the tenants and the people some opportunity to present their case. I was simply laughed at and ignored. They thought there was no chance of the bill even coming before the House; so they did not take me very seriously. In the meantime hundreds of people came to the office and implored me and our committee to do something about the rents that have been taxed the poor people in this District.

"It amounts to a scandal that Federal employes who come here cannot live decently or get a place to cover their heads for less than $50 a room in any decent, respectable community in this city. That $50 a room includes one room with a Murphy bed, a bath, and a small kitchenette.

"I leave it the members of the House who come from big cities to say whether the rents in their respective cities compare with rents in Washington. There is no question about it. They cannot. There is not a city in the country where rents are higher than in the city of Washington and I know something about the situation."

Concluding, she admitted there was no chance of obtaining a vote on the bill during the afternoon, but she warned the House that the bill will be brought up again and a vote will be taken ultimately.

Blanton ran afoul of the District Committee chairman a second time when he read a copy of a telegram she sent to the mass meeting held recently by the District Medical Society.

After he had read a telegram strongly commending the purpose of the meeting, Blanton asked Mrs. Norton whether she sent it.

"I did, and I'm proud of it," she replied.

"If the members only knew of the conditions in hospitals here, they would arise and denounce anyone who refused adequate appropriations for the health needs of Washington."

Blanton admitted that he rents a house in Washington but insisted that he is "a fair landlord."

Ellenbogen Defends Bill.

Ellenbogen took the floor to defend his bill and to cite a decision of the United States Supreme Court in support of its constitutionality.

The measure was attacked as unconstitutional and a "confusion of rent control and housing" by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, the only committee member to oppose the favorable report.

He quoted figures gathered from want ads to support his contention that there is no shortage of empty apartments and houses, and he advocated the demobilizing of New Deal alphabetical agencies as a solution to congestion.

WPA to Spend Over 3 Millions On D. C. Works

$1,580,067 Set for Roads; $1,680,062 for Public Buildings.

Nearly 70 per cent of the $4,456,402, or more than $3,119,000, of WPA money to be spent in the District will go for construction projects of various sorts, WPA Administrator Hopkins disclosed yesterady in making public a report covering relief expenditures throughout the country.

The Hopkins report broke down construction projects for Washington into the following classifications

Highways, roads and streets, $1,580,067, or 35.4 per cent; public buildings, governmental and educational, $168,062, of 3.8 per cent; parks and playgrounds, $539,533, or 12.1 per cent; water supply and sewer systems, $575,832, or 12.9 per cent, and airports and airways, $243,781, or 5.5 per cent.

The remaining 30.3 per cent of the funds, Hopkins said, will be spent to provide work for women, white collar and other professional and technical unemployed workers.

In Maryland, expenditures for construction will represent approximately 90 per cent of the total—the highest construction percentage of the 45 States covered in the report—and in Virginia 60 per cent will go for the same type of projects.

The total for Maryland was $7,865,851, while Virginia has been allotted $8,295,658. In all cases the report was made on the basis of figures for December 31.

Store Thief Given Six-Month Term

John Irving Chesley, colored, 28, 1503 Sixth street northwest, was sentenced to serve six months in jail yesterday when arraigned before Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt on a charge of petit larceny.

Stripe Changers, Sea Horses and Lion Heads Here.

Fish! Little fish plain fish and colored fish—have been brought here from all part sof the world, by the National Aquarium Society for a fish convention in the basement of the Department of Commerce Building this week.

Fishes from Asia, Africa, Europe, South America and Australia, are swimming about in their tanks and are giving the fishy eye to the thousands who are coming to see them.

Fred G. Orsinger, aquarium director and chairman of the general committee fo rthe exhibit, took a reporter into a private room to show him the Japanese fighting fish. Now, Japanese fighting fish are scrappy fellows, and the gentlemen in Japan look to their ghting fish in much the same light that the Southern looks to his fighting cock.

Orsinger removed two of the fighters from their glass jars, one a blue warrior about 2 inches long, and another red antagonist with a mean scowl, and place dthem together in a glass tank. The blue showed an inclination to do batle, but the red wasn't interested; he gave the smaller fish the sea horse laugh and moved off. Orsinger sighed. "But he's not yellow," he said, quick to defend the valor of his charges.

Strange names and strange shapes prevail at the exhibit. There is the black Moor telescope, the lion head, the shebunkin, te scalari, and te spiny puffer. And the sea horse with his curly tail, of course. Some change their stripes, and some even fish for other fish with their own bait on their noses.

The smallest fish is the guppy, a tiny species about an inch long, which bears young suppys alive. The largest is the knife fish, about 8 inches long, who hails from the streams of India, and e lies in the bottom of his tank glaring sullenly out at the more abundant life.

Some of the fish were brought to this exhibit with great difficulty and expense. 'Members of the society, who co-operated to make this fish show a success, deserve great praise for their enthusiasm and assistance," said Orsinger.

He pointed out that each member who contributed fishes, did so with the knowledge that his pet might die from the shock of handling, the artificial lights, or the change of water and air.

All the fishes in the exhibit are intended for home aquaria, and Orsinger says that anyone who would take the trouble to set up an aquarium, would soon throw away his golf clubs for a bowl of guppy fish.

Girl Trapped

Firemen Cpt Away Drain to Free Victim.

Little 3-year-old Agnes M. Powell, of Hyattsville, Md., who was visiting friends in the 1300 block of Thirty-sixth street northwest yesterday, was forced to halt her play for half an hour.

She caught her foot in an old-fashioned drain pipe in front of 1324 Thirty-sixth street and was unable to remove it. A passerby who saw the girl's plight called the fire rescue squad to release her foot. Half an hour was spent removing the pipe from the pavement, while Agnes gazed bewilderly at the spectators who gathered to watch the operation.

After the pipe was removed, the girl resumed her play, none the worse for the experience.

Social Groups Protest Slash In D. C. Budget

Indorse Request for Restoration of Funds; Statistical Needs Shown.

Unanimous indorsement of the request of the D. C. Commissioners for restoration by Congress of cuts made in the budget for Public Welfare work was voted by the Council of Social Agencies at its monthly meeting yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. The vote was taken on the recommendation of the board of directors of the council, which met just previous to the regular meeting.

Sanford Bates, president of the council, explained that the welfare budget submitted by the Commissioners had been considerably reduced, and there was also a need for an additional $600,000 to meet relief needs in the District. President Bates was authorized to name a committee to aid in furthering these activities.

The need of a definite statistical agency for Washington was stressed in the program by John Ihlder, head of the alley authorities, under the general title of "Know Your City." Ihlder stated it is hard to obtain information on building or any other given subject because of fluctuations of which there are no real records.

James Ring, director of the real property inventory, told of his difficulty in trying to obtain housing and other records while conducting the inventory. Mr. Ring told of taking a census of housing with workers from the Civil Works Administration and said they were forced to start practically at the beginning because records were not available.

Miss Dorothy Cline, of the legislative committee on low cost housing of the Central Labor Union, told of the aims of her organization toward better standards of housing for low wages earners.

Charles A. Jones, general manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, said that ... many loans are made here and the percentage of delinquencies is very low. This, he said, accounts for the fact that Washington is the only city with more than 40,000 population of which a survey is not being made. Mr. Jones also stressed the dearth of information available here.

'New' Tuberculars May Crowd Wards

Active tuberculosis cases discovered during the recent city-wide survey to ascertain prevalence of the disease will make heavy demands on the city's hospital facilities, threatened with reduced funds under the annual District appropriation bill passed by the House.

This estimate was made yesterday by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, on the basis of preliminary reports made by Dr. A. Barkley Coulter, tuberculosis director. Full result of the survey will not be known until detailed analysis has been completed, the health officer said. More than 12,000 persons were X-rayed during the campaign.

Reports show that more than 800 active and potential and active cases were discovered. About half the newly discovered sufferers are said to be in need of hospital care.

4 Local Holdup Victims Identify Chicago Pair

Photographs of two paroled convicts, under arrest in Chicago for a series of robberies, were identified here yesterday by four men who were held up by bandits several weeks ago.

The two convicts, Richard Breen and Charles Agnew, both 23, released from the Illinois State Penitentiary in Joliet in 1934, were held under bonds of $130,000 each on several charges of robbery last week in Chicago.

Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, ace investigator of the police robbery squad here, arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to question the men in connection with robberies of three liquor stores and a taxicab driver.

Citizens Units Voice Protest At Fund Slash

Kalorama Group Favors Charging U. S. Government 'It's Share.

Complaints at the slash in the Federal appropriation to the District were voiced by the Northeast Citizens' Association and the Stanton Park Citizens' Association at their meetings last night.

The latter group voted to request the enate to restore the full appropriation for which the Health Department originally asked and went on record as considering such an amount vital to protection of health and reduction of the pulmonary tuberculosis death rate in the District.

The Kalorama Citizens' Association proposed a new appropriations system which would set up a board of estimate comprising the District Commissioners and representatives from the Department of the Interior and from the Bureau of the Budget.

This proposed board of estimate would annually compute the actual cost of services provided the Federal Government by the District, evaluate Government real estate and other tax-exempt property and include these figures in the District appropriation bill when submitted to Congress.

The Kalorama association adopted a resolution indorsing the Sisson bill to repeal the red rider but went on record as opposed to a proposed bill to limit the work of women in the District to 0 hours a week.

Mary Edith Coulson, of the Council of Social Agencies, addressed the Kalorama meeting on a proposed probation bill for the District. The association indorsed the principles of the bill, which would allow probation to adult first offenders not convicted of serious crimes.

Seeks Original Amount.

The Northeast Citizens' Association, meeting at Ludlow School, voted to recommend to the appropriations committees of hte Senate and the House that the Federal appropriations to the District be increased to the amount originally asked by the District Commisisoners. This amount the association considered absolutely essential to take care of District needs. It was pointed out that the amount of taxable property in the District is constantly decreasing as the Federal Government buys additional land.

Disapproved were the Ellenbogen bill for rent regulation and Commissioner Allen's proposed referendum for the District. The value of referenda, it was sonsidered, would not be worth the expense of setting up the necessary machinery.

The association recommended that a proposed airport for the District be constructed near Benning. It also adopted a restluoin favoring a bill for narcotic control which would be the equivalent of the Harrison narcatic act.

The meeting went on record as being opposed to a proposed merger between the Washington Gas Light Co. and the Georgetown Gas Light Co. It also proposed a merger between the Washington Rapid Transist Co. and the Capital Rapid Transit Co. "except on a basis of the actual value of its property involved in the merger."

Ask Increase in Police.

The Stanton Park Citizens Association, meeting at Peabody School, voted to write to aj. Ernest W. Brown and to the Senate Appropriations Committee asking an increase in police protection in the Ninth Precinct. The meeting had previously listened to an address by Capt. Richard H. Mansfield, who stated that he had only 72 men at his disposal, instead of the 100 for which he had asked.

The Southeast Businessmen's Association adopted a resolution asking for the inclusion of $35,000 in the District's appropriation bill to provide for a supplementary water storage tank at Fort duPont. A like sum was stricken from the original bill. The association pointed out that the tanks now furnishing water to the Anacostia region were built in 1913 and are now in poor condition.

Other business of the group included adoption of a resolution indorsing Judge Gus A. Schuldt's reappointment as judge in the Traffic Court, and a resolution urging the continuation of Hine Junior High School as a night school for the remainder of the school term. The school is now scheduled to close at the end of this month.

After adopting a resolution reiterating its opposition to horse racing in the District and attending to one or two routine business matters, the Park View Citizens Association adjourned its regular meeting in the Park View Platoon School last night out of respect for the late J. Preston Shannon, one of the association's most active members, who died lats week.

A play presented by pupils of the school preceded the business session.

Cafritz, Viner Hailed At Testimonial Party

Hazen Voices the City's Thanks to Retiring Center Officers.

Washington Jewish and gentile leaders honored Morris Cafritz and Harry Viner for their services to the Jewish Community Center last night.

Several hundred persons attended the testimonial dinner in the Mayflower Hotel and heard Cafritz, retiring center president, and Viner, retiring secretary-treasurer, praised for years of civic work.

Speakers included Commissioner Hazen, Robert V. Fleming, Riggs National Bank president; Benjamin Ourisman, new center president; Harry King, first center president; Maurice Bisgyer, center director; Representative Emanuel Celler, New York, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., Community Chest director.

Among honor guests were Representative Sol Bloom, New York; Walter Johnson, the former ball player; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cafritz, parents of Morris, and George Offutt, A. B. C. Board chairman.

Hazen's Tribute.

Hazen lauded Cafritz and Viner for their part in making available to poor children of all creeds the swimming pool, gymnasium and other facilities of the center.

"It gives me pleasure," he said, "to express the gratitude of the people of Washington for the record of the community center in bringing the finer things of life—education, music and art—to those who cannot pay.

"The community center is doing a great deal to build good men and prevent juvenile delinquency.

"I only wish Washington had more public spirited men like these fine gentlemen we are honoring tonight."

Fleming declared Cafritz "has earned the confidence of every business man in the city" and commended Viner for his outstanding success in handling the center's financial affairs.

Doors Open to All.

"The Jewish Community Center," he added, "is doing splendid work. I am particularly impressed by what it has done in behalf of underprivileged boys. 'Its doors are thrown open without regard to race or creed.

"I am reminded that George Washington once said, 'Knowledge is the surest basis of public happiness.' That is what the Jewish Community Center is creating .

King told of the aid of Cafritz, Viner and others in raising $200,000 for construction of the center's building at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest. He explained $50,000 additional was provided by the Jewish Welfare Board.

"Feeling Broken Down."

"The center," he said, "has broken down all feeling between Jew and Jew. The only requirement to enjoy the facilities of the center is that one be an American."

Bisgyer reviewed the history of the center, now observing its tenth anniversary.

His auditors, Willett said, would profit from the dinner if they would emulate the traits of character displayed in center work by the honor guests.

Mrs. Cafritz and Mrs. Viner were presented with bouquets.

Cherry Tree Fete Planned By City Heads

Official Sponsorship For Celebration Is Decided Upon.

Regatta on Potomac, Sports Activities Scheduled.

Public celebration of the blooming of the world-famous Japanese cherry blossoms about the Tidal Basin and elsewhere in the parks o fthe National Capital will be held under official sponsorship this year, it was decided at a meeting held in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday.

The meeting was called by the Commissioner and attended by Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, and representatives of the Washington Hotel Men's Association.

Details were not worked out. Plans are to be further discussed at another and larger meeting which Commissioner Hazen is to call next Tuesday. At that time, he sadi, committees will be appointed to take charge of various aspects of the celebratoin.

Blooming o fthe blossoms will be day period during which a regatta officially celebrated over a three-will be held on the Potomac . Athletic meets, horse shows and parades also will be included.

More than hal fa million persons are expected to attend, it was said. Over 100,000 visitors were estimated to have come to Washington to see the blooms last year, although official celebration was not undertaken because ofplans for the Shriners' convention.

Date of the festival will depend on the wetaher. It will be fixed as far as reasonable can be done in advance of the blooming of the trees. This occurs sometime in April.

Appeal for Killer Planned by Groups

Representatives of various colored civic associations united their efforts yesterday to strengthen a plea for executive clemency for Albert Preston, condemned murderer, whose death warrant was sent to the District Jail Friday. An effort will be made to reach President Roosevelt early this week. The date of execution has been set for Fri- the fact that Clarence A. Yancey, day of next week.

Hope for clemency was based on who was shot by Preston, actually resided at 2821 Sherman avenue, while the address used throughout the trial was 2021 Sherman avenue, which is fictitious. Preston left the scene of a quarrel with Yancey and went to his home at 2235 Eighth street, where he armed himself. Yancey was shot in front of this address after following Preston five blocks.

Friends of the condemned man have expressed the opinion that the jury would have been otherwise influenced had it been aware that Yancey, when killed, was not on his way to his home at 2821 Sherman avenue, which is in the opposite direction to the address used in the trial. J. Y. E. Allen, attorney for Preston, stated yesterday that Charles Edward Russell, the Rev. D. E. Wiseman, of the Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer; Elder Michaux, Dr. J. E. Briggs and others will endeavor to reach the President in Preston's interest.

South Dakota Society To convene March 15

The South Dakota State Society will hold its anual banquet at the Lafayette Hotel, March 15 at 1 p. m., with Jay H. Williams, the society's president in the chair.

Guests of honor include Senators Bulow and Norbeck, of South Dakota, and their wives; Representatives Werner and Hildebrandt and their wives, former Commissioner and Mrs. Charles H. Burke and Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes.

Jack Benny Brings the Fruits of Wide Experience to Loew's Fox Stage Friday

Has Scored in Three Mediums Through Years

Began Career as Violinist; Best Films of the Month; Notes of the Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

When Jack Benny makes his appearance on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater on Friday, he will represent to the younger generation in the audience merely a happy eventuation of the era of radio and microphone pastiming. To the old-timers present he will personify an older and more versatile "theater" than that.

Jack Benny, whose real name is Jack Kubelsky, began laying the foundation of his ability as a public entertainer when he was 6. At that age, his father presented him with a violin and a monkey wrench. Legend has it that the elder Kubelsky gave his son the violin first, in the hope that he would like it, and the monkey wrench afterward, plumbing also being an honorable profession.

The paternal intuition seems to have been infallible. At the age of 13, Jack was still agitating feline internals with the tail of a horse and had definitely made up his mind to make the fiddle render him a livelihood. He insists it never did.

Joined the Navy.

Then the great war came along and Jack enlisted in the United States Navy, taking his violin along, just in case and, presumably, in a case, if you get the idea. On a certain occasion, Benny was made master of ceremonies at a naval station show and discovered that his idle, ad lib chatter got him far greater response than his bowing of the fiddle strings. From that time on, his career followed closely the lines of Will Rogers and his lariat's.

The late cowboy discovered as he went along that the more he talked, the less use he had for ropes. Mr. Benny similarly has found out that the more he jests the less need he has for the fiddle and the bow.

Such, more or less, was the genesis of the Benny emergence as one of the foremost comics of his day, not only in one medium, but in three.

There always has been a deliberateness and drollery about the work of this fellow that has added to the effectiveness of his humor. It has carried him through several Shubert revues, two editions of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," half a dozen feature pictures and, finally, to his present eminence as one of the ace men of the air waves.

Teamed With Nora Bayes.

I recall a week in the remote era when B. F. Keith's, under the management of Roland Robbins, still was playing two-a-day at a $2.20 top scale of prices, when Jack Benny and the late Nora Bayes were on the same bill. Each contributed a single act to the program, Miss Bayes in a group of songs, Mr. Benny in a monologue during which he waved his violin about a great deal and played it very little.

By one of those impromptu arrangements that Roland Robbins seemed to have a peculiar gift for perfecting, Miss Bayes and Mr. Benny were induced to appear together later on the bill in an interval of ad lib cross-fire that afforded the most spontaneous and most hilarious humor I ever have encountered in a theater.

Nora Bayes, although primarily a singing comedienne, also was a quick thinker with a hair-trigger command of lively repartee. When she and Mr. Benny matched wits in an unrehearsed interval of extemporaneous banter, it was something to listen to, believe one who sat and reveled in it.

It is unfortunate that the radio generation can not reconstruct this bountiful background of Benny buffoonery.

Callers at the drama desk yesterday afternoon included Miss Mary Ward and Russel Crouse, both in the interests of the Theater Guild. Mr. Crouse, author, librettist and playwright, also serves as publicist-in-chief of the Guild activities and is here to watch the premiere of the new Sherwood play, "Idiot's Delight," starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne as well as pave the way for next week's presentation at the National of the Guild's production of George Gershwin's folk-opera of "Porgy and Bess," based on the drama "Porgy," by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward. Miss Ward's last visit to the Capital was in association with Eva LeGallienne. She is active now on behalf of "Porgy and Bess" and by her enthusiasm makes it difficult to await the coming of the opera next week.

"Best of the Month."

The March 1 issue of the "Selected Motion Pictures" pamphlet, published monthly by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, is especially interested in its department devoted to those film releases which are deemed "Best of the Month."

Predicated upon the findings of both West and East Coast previewing committees, representing all sects and creeds, the March 1 brochure chooses seven releases as those entitled to stand out above the others in the same period of distribution.

The seven selections, in the order in which the booklet sets them forth—which, I believe, has no bearing upon their comparative merits—are "Follow the Fleet," the new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers vehicle now on view at RKO-Keith's; "Modern Times," the new Charlie Chaplin production, already previewed in this space and soon to be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace; "The Music Goes 'Round," in which Harry Richman attempted a screen "comeback" at the Earle last week; "Next Time We Love," starring Margaret Sullavan, seen not so long ago at RKO-Keith's; "The Prisoner of Shark Island," the biographical drama based on the tragic experiences of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd; "Rose Marie," the perennial—locally, at least—musical comedy in which Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have been heard weeks on end, and "Soak the Rich," the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur social satire that completes a fortnight's engagement at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night.

There are one or two inclusions in this list that will cause certain keen observers of the cinema and its progress to doubt that the preview committees upon whose appraisals these reports are based are endowed with any greater discriminatory powers than the average run of theatergoers who, in at least a few instances, probably would disagree with them violently.

When "Soak the Rich" concludes its run at the Belasco tomorrow night, it will be followed by a revival of United Artists' picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Arrowsmith," with Ronald Colman, Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy in the foremost roles. Revivals of past screen successes that already have enjoyed profitable downtown runs is a new feature of the house policy on Lafayette Square that will be watched with interest. This will be the second of the current season. The first was George Arliss in "Disraeli."

"The Show Must Go On."

While Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne were opening Robert Emmett Sherwood's new play of "Idiot's Delight" to a standing-room audience in the National Theater last night, Katharine Cornell was celebrating her deferred New York premiere in the revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan." In the latter event was reflected something of the spirit of that outrageous fetich of the theater that "the show must go on."

While on her preliminary tour in Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," Katharine Cornell caught cold in Buffalo. Nevertheless, she proceeded to her next stand, Cleveland, where she gave her four scheduled performances under considerable personal discomfort. By Saturday night she was a very sick woman. She spent Sunday and part of Monday in bed, but insisted upon traveling to Pittsburgh on Monday and opening her engagement there that night, despite the fact that by every indication she should have remained in bed. She continued acting for five performances this arduous role of Joan, which requires her being almost continually on the stage for three hours. By Friday morning her condition developed into an acute case of laryngitis.

Forced to Close.

Only then and only because she could not speak even in a whisper did she consent to close the theater.

The actress wept to think she had to disappoint three sold-out houses.

Miss Cornell returned to New York, determined to open her engagement there the following Tuesday, but nature again stepped in, this time with aggravated sinus trouble. So the "show" could not go on, much to her grave unhappiness, for this is the first instance in her career that she has had to turn away audiences.

In the face of the actor's viewpoint, it is interesting that the public has another view of the matter. The sold-out house for her New York premiere remained faithful to her for her deferred opening performance last night.

Only four seats out of 1,212 were returned, and these quickly were disposed of to the long waiting list of would-be patrons.

Since The Post was the only paper to announce the extra Friday matinee performance of "Idiot's Delight" in its dramatic columns yesterday morning, it is an interesting commentary upon the moot matter of "reader interest" that long box-office lines resumed their winding courses through the lobby of the theater and out into E street throughout the morning hours. The sale has been so brisk that it is practically only a matter of hours until the Friday matinee also will be sold out, like all the rest of the week. Hurry if you want that ticket!

The Talent Judge.

It is Henry Sutherland, West Coast commentator, who takes a United Press wire in hand to delve back a few years into the career of Maj. Edward Bowes as a judge of latent talent.

"Maj. Bowes may be the No. 1 discoverer of amateur talent, but in Hollywood he is remembered as the bright young man who looked over Garbo and tabbed her a sure-fire flop," reminisces Mr. Sutherland.

It was back in 1925 when the major was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer junior vice president.

Metro had just imported the late Mauritz Stiller great director of Svenska Film Industrie, and, to get him, had had to contract his protege, then billed as the "Norma Shearer of Sweden."

Salary Wrangle.

Garbo had signed for $350 a week, but once in New York Stiller balked and said he wouldn't go another step Hollywoodward unless his charge was given $500. Greta lacked a month of being 21 then, so the previous contract meant nothing.

For almost a month Stiller stalled, and at length Maj. Bowes was given the job of placating the great man and, incidentally, settling with Garbo for as little as possible.

The three of them met with an interpreter in Maj. Bowes' office, and, after a long wrangle, the major came wryly across with a new contract, assuring the pride of Sweden $400 a week.

"I don't know what possessed Louis Mayer to sign that colorless girl. She'll hang around Hollywood for six months, then they'll have to ship her back to Sweden."

Reward-of-Talent Note.

Quick, boy, sock that gong on the major!

Comes to Fox Stage on Friday

An unusual camera study of Jack Benny, one of the most popular entertainers contemporaneously diverting the American public, whether on stage, screen or radio. When he comes to the stage of Loew's Fox Theater to headline the vaudeville portion of the bill in person, beginning Friday, he will be assisted by Mary Livingstone, in private life Mrs. Benny, and other associates familiar from his broadcast hour. Benny's last local screen appearance was with Ted Healy, Una Merkel and Nat Pendleton in "It's in the Air," the comedy of the stratosphere.

In his enthusiasm to take advantage of the current headlines as a source of timely and exciting drama, Robert Emmett Sherwood temporarily has abandoned that singleness of purpose and directness of attack in shaping his dramatic structure that made his "Reunion in Vienna" and "The Petrified Forest" models of dramaturgic integrity.

For the moment, he has lost the knack of concentrated attack on his chosen subject and permits his plot to ramble through entertaining, but unrelated, paths of theatrical effort.

"Idiot's Delight" launches a vitriolic attack on the munitions makers and sprays those who inspire international strife and world war with a machine-gun fire of explosive verbiage and then conveniently converts itself into the simple consummation of an obscure romance that began in the Wm. Bryan Hotel in Omaha, Nebr., many years before.

The play is loosely woven, ardent in its condemnation of war, indecisive in its characterization and prolific in the extraneous elements of musical comedy which it is able to introduce without too great a strain upon the credulity of the spectator, thus taking rank as the least efficient and least effective of the Sherwood plays that have come along since Jane Cowl captivated the theater-going world in the same author's "Road to Rome."

There is a great deal of entertainment here—thanks principally to the individual capabilities of Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Sydney Greenstreet and their associate players—but precious little sound drama, marked by those qualities of inevitability and conviction that grip an audience and cause them to think they have seen a reflection of life rather than imagination's gossamer mirage.

Played in One Setting.

The single setting of the play is in the cocktail lounge of the Hotel Monte Gabrielle in the Italian Alps, near the frontiers of Switzerland and Austria. Here assemble an American "grifter," in the patois of the easy-money world, with xix beautiful blondes in tow, with whom he has been touring the Balkans in a song-and-dance act; a munitions maker and his inamorita—until it comes time for the passports to be signed—a young English couple on their honeymoon and a German scientist, who is on the high road to a cure for cancer, but abandons it when the world bursts into flame again, as it did in 1914, and bombing planes unload theri murderous cargoes from overhead, even in this out-of-the-way spot.

During the action of the play, Harry Van, the American impresario, finds it possible to "put on his show" and also to discover that Irene, the mysterious consort of Achille Weber, the munitions salesman on a grand scale, is the girl with whom he had had that affair in Omaha years before.

It also is made possible for a young French pacifist to denounce war in such vehement terms that he is politely taken out and shot by the Italian military

It is all very melodramatic, a few steps in advance of what current events may bring forth and explicitly frank in its pointing of the finger at certain nations and what their policies may evolve.

Is Splendidly Played.

The piece, of course, is flawlessly played. Last night's performance was letter-perfect on the part of every member of the cast and revealed Alfred Lunt as a "song-and-dance-man," who may not be a match for George M. Cohan's, but who still can hold his own with the best of the second-raters—which is precisely what he is supposed to be in the play.

Miss Fontanne, in the role of the ostensible spy, who belatedly revives that Omaha romance with Harry Van, plays with a strong Russian accent, that is particularly well assumed, and a long-bob, blonde wig that causes her to look amazingly like Garbo.

Whatever qualities of suspense "Idiot's Delight" may be said to possess are traceable directly to Miss Fontanne; 95 per cent of the melodrama's humor stems from the surprising capacity Mr. Lunt betrays for encompassing the complete mental and social picture of a typical small-time, honky-tonk artist, who feels that he is wasting major talents on minor activities. There can be no complaints laid at the feet of the costars of the Guild's newest production that they did not turn in superlative individual performances. Whatever delinquencies may be found in the play are Mr. Sherwood's, not theirs.

Greenstreet, Whorf Score.

In the role of Dr. Waldersee, the German scientist, Sydney Greenstreet contributes a finely drawn characterization, although one that places no great stress upon those known abilities that have carried him to triumph in roles of far greater demands and mportance. $n the part of Quillery, the young worker who decries the whole ghastly business of war and is shot down for his candor in saying so, Richard Whorf acquits himself of one of the finest character portrayels in the entire cast. He was accorded a vociferous round of applause after his "big scene" last night.

Barry Thomson, as an American "greeter" in the Alpine hotel; Edward Raquello, as Capt. Locicero, who enforced the embargo on visas and the privilege of crossing the border; Bretaigne Windust, who directed the play skillfully, and Jean cIntyre, as Mr. and Mrs. Cherry, the newlyweds, and Francis Compton, as the hated munitions maker, who deems himself a benefactor for affording a quick and ready means of ridding the earth of the distraught, the poverty stricken nad the unhappy at the hands of those able to buy his ware, all efficiently perform the tasks allotted them by the author, although many of those taks fail to ring true.

Those Six Blondes.

Jacqueline Page, Connie Crowell, Frances Foley, Etna Ross, Marjorie Baglin and Ruth Timmons are the six blondes who aid and abet Mr. Lunt in his efforts to bring cheer to a marooned band of wayfarers patiently awaiting the worst.

That "Idiot's Delight" possesses the essential potentialities of vast public amusement was evidenced last night when the curtain was raised and lowered 13 times at the conclusion of the last act in response to the audience's acclaim of the piece as an entertaining evening in the theater. These 13 curtain calls were shared by the entire company, Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne refusing to take any personal credit for a performance that attracted the largest standing-room audience of the season.

Ernie Orsatti, the former ball player, now an agent, and Dixie Dunbar are playing "Boy Meets Girl" . . . After Sam Goldwyn had bought the screen rights to the song, "Mandy," he learned that William Anthony McGuire bought the screen rights to the song, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody." . . . Goldwyn called in his representative and said: "Why didn't you buy 'A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody' instead of 'Mandy?'" . . . The representative answered: "But you said to buy 'Mandy.'" . . . Goldwyn said: "You should have known that when I said "Mandy" I meant 'A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody'" . . . Harry Brand bawled out a pal . . . "You're nothing but a fair weather friend," declared Harry. "Turning down a fellow just because he's on top."

G. W. Frosh Upset Rinaldi in Extra Period, 22-20, For Title

Faris Is Star In Gruelling Thriller

By Dave Herman.

BEFORE a hysterical capacity crowd of 1,600 dyed-in-the wool basketball fans, George Washington Univeristy's freshman team thundered down the stretch like true champions, and then put on a thrilling exhibition in an extra five-minute period to defeat Rinaldi Tailors, 22 to 20, last night at Heurich's gym and win the District A. A. U.-Washington Post unlimited title.

The victory went down in the books as an upset, as Rinaldi, victor ove rthe Buff and Blue collegians in two previous contests this season, was the odds-on favorite before game time.

While each of the six players used by Coach Otts Zahn during the 45 minutes played brilliant basketball to set the Tailors on their collective ears, it remained for a tall, handsome young chap from Freemont, Nebr.—one Bob Faris—to chuck in the tying and winning goals.

Faris, a 6-footer, a forward, came streaking down the court in the last minute of the regulation game, sifted through Sammy Hook and Ollie Tipton, Rinaldi guards, and with a clever flip of the ball with his sturdy right hand, fired the shot that enabled the yearlings to knot the count at 20-all.

With the gym a bedlam of excitement, the din almost deafening, the two greatly refresher teams went out to "shoot the works" in the extra period.

Shoot Meticulously.

Quickly the minutes ticked by. The teams guarded, passed and shot meticulously, but there was no scoring.

But Rinaldi didn't reckon with Faris. It was he who put in the goal that tied Rockville in an extra period last week, and it was Faris who had been a scoring thorn in the Rinaldi side all night.

With less than two minutes to go, Faris took a pass from Sid Silkowitz, dribbled over to the left side of the court, and almost on a line with the basket, let fly with the identical shot that had tied up the score.

Through the hoops the ball went without even touching the rim, and with it G. W. had sealed victory, for in those dying seconds, Rinaldi players peppered the backboard, but to no avail, and the freshmen resorted to mild "freezing."

Faris High Scorer.

It was a spectacular game throughout, Faris captured high point honors, scoring 12 points.

Close guarding featured the first half, with Noonan scoring a field goal and a foul to give Rinaldi a 3-2 lead after ten minutes. Silkowitz got the opening goal. With 15 minutes gone, it was 5-all. Baronio made a goal for G. W., Lucal one from Rinaldi and Faris and Hook shot the goals that knotted the count at 9-all as the whistle for the half blew.

Rinaldi brought into play its famous passing game, featuring Hook, Lucas and Tipton, and ran the score up to 15-10 in five minutes, Tipton and Lucas getting goals and Faris a free throw. Keyser, on a pivot play, shot a goal and Hook put in a foul, Faris pocketed a foul goal and a field throw, and, with ten minutes of the second half gone, Rinaldi led, 18-13.

Score Is Tied Again.

From midcourt Faris tossed in a long one, Silkowitz followed suit with a lengthy toss and Collins added a foul goal, balancing the scales at 18-all. Lucas got a long one that looked good, but Faris followed with the side shot that tied the score again.

In 145-pound games, Bovello Plumbers defeated Northeast Boys' Club, 37-25, and Cook's Flashes took St. Martin's, 29-28.

Mrs. Van Ryn Wins Indoor Net Title

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, captured the Women's National Indoor tennis championship tonight by defeating Miss Norma Taubele, of New York, 6—4, 6—3.

Displaying well-rounded form, Mrs. Van Ryn vanquished Miss Taubele in a fast contest. Each failed to gain an advantage, and games followed service until the seventh game of the first set, when Mrs. Van Ryn, by aggressive net play, broke through to lead, 4 to 3. Her service working perfectly throughout the match, supplemented by her superb ground stroking, she constantly forced Miss Taubele into errors.

Miss Taubele rallied in the second game of the second set to break through her opponent's service, after Mrs. Van Ryn gave the impression of a runaway match by taking Miss Taubele's service in the first game. Mrs. Van Ryn again broke Miss Taubele's service by rushing to the net to bring off telling placements.

Mrs. Van Ryn forced the play at all times during the match, and by her cross-court placements and aggressiveness tired Miss Taubele and ran out the match in three straight games.

Karl Schroeder, of Sweden, and Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., won the national doubles championship, defeating Gregory Mangin, of Newark, and Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, in straight sets, 6—3, 8—6, 6—2.

"I'm not worried about getting my salary demand," said Paul. "But I'm serious about the police job if I don't get it.'

Pin Congress Opened in Spite of Poor Aim

Indianapolis, Ind., March 9.—At exactly 8 p. m., Central standard time, tonight, Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana sent a ball wobbling down the No. 16 alley in the Coliseum for a 310-pin strike and the annual American Bowling Congress was off for a month's run.

The Governor's aim—he said it was the first time he'd ever picked up a ball—was not so good, but exigencies had been provided for, and as the ball approached the No. 7 pin every pin on 31 of the 32 alleys fell with a resounding crash. The pin boy on No. 20 forgot to pull the string.

Orlando, Fla., March 9.

MRS. CLARK GRIFFITH has batted .000 in her first venture as a scout for her husband's ball team and forthwith resigned . . .

She invited two Chicago lads, sons of a schoolday chum, to try out here with the Nats . . . Mr. Griffith took one look at the pair in uniform and shipped 'em back to Chicago the same day . . . Mrs. Griffith then formally closed her career as a scout with the statement: "Clark has been wrong before about young ball players. It will now be a pleasure to remind him that he let Jack Bentley, Charley Jamieson, Bing Miller and Buddy Myer get away from the team."

POVICH.

Al Mamux, manager of the Nats' Albany farm, who is here seeking Washington discards, regretfully reports that he was forced to turn down a $1,700-per-week offer to go into vaudeville with Alabama Pitts, Sing Sing's campus hero, who graduated to the Albany club . . . Mamux, a vaudevillian in his own right, with the best tenor voice in baseball, was offered a four-week engagement with Pitts . . . but Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, self-appointed mentor of the former convict, refused to allow Pitts to accept the offer . . . out of respect for Pitts' promise to Judge Landis that he would not exploit his fame as a convict if he were permitted to enter organized baseball.

Pitcher Jimmy DeShong and Outfielder Jesse Hill were surprised and disappointed to learn that they must pay their own laundry bills in spring training . . . They report that the Yankees always footed the incidental expenses of the players in the South as well as during the regular season . . . Thelma Griffith, the blonde secretary-niece of the Nats' owner, is busily occupied with salary advances to the players who do not go on the pay roll officially until the season starts . . . One of the Nats' veteran pitchers is so far in hock to Griffith as a result of salary advances obtained during the winter that he is not scheduled to go on the pay roll until June 1.

The Nats' farm system has now been expanded to five clubs . . . Already owning or controlling Chattanooga, Albany, Harrisburg and Panama City, Griffith has come into possession of the Mayodan, N. C., team of the Bi-State League within the last three days . . . Joe Cambria, Albany owner who has an iron-clad working agreement with the Nats, will sponsor the Mayodan club, which will play class D ball and serve as an incubator for future Nats . . . Five Cubans whom Cambria recently signed on a barnstorming trip to Havana, will form the nucleus of the Mayodan team.

Buddy Myer admits to two superstitions . . . He regards putting his socks on inside out as the greatest curse that could befall him, and under certain conditions he picks up every hat pin he spots on the ground . . . Leaving his apartment to catch the train for Philadelphia and the last game of the 1935 season, he stooped in the lobby to pick up a hairpin that was pointing in his direction . . . "What's that?" Mrs. Myer queried curiously . . . "That, honey, is a two-base hit," said Buddy as he carefully tucked it into his vest pocket . . . Later that day on his last appearance at bat in Shibe Park, Myer slammed out a two-bagger for his fourth straight hit that won him the batting championship of the league by a fraction of a point and earned him a $500 award by the American League.

Mrs. Joe Kuhel is the stooge for her husband in his black magic exhibitions and admits to boredom with it all, but effects an excellent prop smile . . . Kuhel, a member of the American Society of Magicians, studied under Cardini, and regularly entertains the rookies here with his card tricks, hocus-pocus and sleight-of-hand stuff . . . Society members are honor bound not to reveal the secret of their tricks to audiences, but readily exchange secrets with each other . . . Down here in Orlando, he's trying to perfect his pet trick of making a pitched ball disappear over the rightfield fence.

Frank Peticolas, the big pitcher whom both Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith deem a sure-shot to be a big league sensation by 1938 at the latest, is the scouting product of Al Schacht . . . He turned up for a tryout with the Nats in Chicago late in 1934 when Schacht was managing the team in Joe Cronin's absence, and Schacht immediately recommended that he be given a contract . . . Too great a personal interest in his work last winter when he drove a beer truck saddled him with 20 pounds of surplus weight, and he is still engaged in trying to get himself into playing condition . . . The company's truck drivers could imbibe as freely as they wished, Peticolas says.

When Jesse Hill complained to Bucky Harris that Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, reprimanded him for attempting to steal without orders last season, Harris gave the fleet outfielder carte blanche permission to steal bases on his own responsibility . . . "I saw Hill on second base a dozen times last year when he could have made third in a breeze against our pitchers," said Harris. "If he doesn't lead the league in stolen bases it's not because I won't turn him loose."

Fla. Revokes License of Meade

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 9.—The Florida State Racing Commission revoked today the license of Don Meade, contract rider for E. R. Bradley, for violation of the rule forbidding jockeys from being financially interested in horses other than the ones they ride.

The rule reads as follows: "No jockey shall bet on any race except through the owner of and on the horse which he rides, and any jockey who shall be proved to the satisfaction of the stewards to have any interest in any race horse, or to have been engaged in any betting transaction, or to have received presents from persons other than the owner, shall have his license revoked."

Meade, who rode Broker's Top to victory in the 1933 Kentucky Derby, appeared with counsel before the commission's executive session to defend himself on the charge lodged by the stewards of Hialeah Park.

A statement, reciting the rule and the finding in Meade's case, was issued by Secretary Walter Donovan, who said that would be all the information officially forthcoming in the revocation.

The 22-year-old Plankington, S. Dak., rider, one of the Nation's leading jockeys, did not lose his right to visit Florida race tracks, but he may not be employed at them in any capacity.

Under the uniform rules of racing, the revocation of Meade's jockey and occupational licenses in Florida may bar his employment in any of the 17 racing States affiliated with the National Association of State Racing Commissioners.

In grounding Meade last week, Hialeah's stewards said only that the suspension was for "unsatisfactory riding and violation of the rules of racing."

The commission further acted upon the report and recommendation of the Hialeah stewards on the suspension of Jockey Charles Landolt, continuing his suspension for a total of 20 racing days from and including March 2. Jockey R. Seabo's suspension by the stewards at Hialeah on March 6 was extended to a total of 10 racing days from and including the day of his suspension by the stewards.

Grant Takes Title.

Palm Beach, March 9 (AP).—Bryan (Bisty) Grant, of Atlanta, ranked No. 3 in the United States, added the Everglades Club invitation tennis singles title to his collection today by defeating Charles R. Harris, West Palm Beach, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3.

The two played on a slippery court, placed in bad condition by continuous rains yesterday and today.

Harris 'Sore,' Calls Extra Practices

Ragged Work in Running Down Trapped Rivals Irks Him.

Afternoon Drills to Be Added Starting Today, He Declares.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 9.—Still nursing the painful memories of his team's wanton and wastrel play last season, Manager Bucky Harris tonight took steps to find a remedy.

He announced to all his Washington regulars that their daily afternoon leave would be canceled tomorrow when both morning and afternoon workouts will be held. The players who have been frequenting Orlando's golf courses and fishing grounds will confine their recreation to the ball field.

Bluntly put, Bucky is sore. The manner in which his men ran the bases last year still rankles within him, as does their clumsy handling of the ball when enemy runners were on base. His intention to conduct only morning workouts here has melted in the heat of his recurrent anger at the slovenly play of last year.

Enumerates Deficiencies.

He's going to drill 'em and drive 'em in the tactics that big leaguers are supposed to know when they're in the big leagues, but in which he has found his club sadly deficient. These deficiencies he enumerated for the press as:

1. Ragged work in running down players caught between the bases.

2. Poor handling of the ball in cut-off plays on throws from the outfield.

3. Sluggishness and slow thinking on attempted double steals both by the Washington club and the opposition.

"When I took over this club last year," said Harris, "I presumed that they were a wise outfit. At first I put down their mistakes as mental lapses that every player suffers once in a while.

Just Plain Dumb.

"But they jolted me out of that belief. They were just plain dumb. If we could take back some of those games we lost by dumb base running and poor handling of the ball, we'd a-been in the first division.

"I held regular schools on tactics when I managed Detroit and that's what I'm going to do here at Orlando this year. I've found out that you can't take for granted that big leaguers know all the fundametnals of the game. They still need to be educated—at least, some of 'em do.

"We've got a lot of young ball players on the club and they're naturally green, but they've got to learn or there's no place for 'em with us."

Half Dozen Throws.

There's no excuse, said Harris, as an example, why any player should handle the ball more than once in a run-down of a man caught between the bases. Yet he pointed out that it often required the Nats a half dozen throws last season to record that kind of an out, and there were occasions when a trapped runner not only was safe but actually advanced a base on the play.

"They're going to be taught," said Bucky, "to run a trapped player back to the bag he came from, and not to turn that ball loose until the runner is about 8 feet from the bag.

"And Cecil Travis is going to handle all the relays from the outfield except when the ball is in the rightfield corner when Buddy Myer will take the throw. Travis has the best relaying arm on the club and outfielders will be directed to throw to him. Myer and Lewis will keep out of all throws from the outfield as a rule.

To Drill Outfielders.

"Those outfielders will be out there tomorrow practicing for a couple of hours on throws. There isn't a bad arm in our outfield now, but that won't count unless they heave to the right bases. I'm going to have base runners out there who will make 'em decide in a split second where to throw and how to throw.

"It's up to Cecil Travis to learn how to choke off those double steals. He's new around second base, where they can either make or break the steal, but I think all he needs is practice."

Irked by a continued rain that prevented a workout this morning after he had given the team a day of rest on Sunday, Manager Bucky Harris took advantage of a halt in the showers and shooed his pitchers and cacthers out to Tinker Field at 5 p. m., for an hour's drill.

Despite the lateness of the hour, Harris ordered the workout of his batterymen in an effort to avoid the dangers of a two-day set back in the condition of the pitchers.

Dizzy Dean Can't Take It, Says Al Todd, Who Gave It

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 9.—Take it from husky Al Todd—who did it with one punch—Virgil Davis or any other big league catcher can whip Dizzy Dean.

"I don't think Diz really wants any part of Davis," Todd said today about Davis' threat to punch the St. Louis Cardinal pitcher's nose the minute he appears in training camp.

"Most of the major league catchers are pretty tough and don't mind being knocked about a bit," Todd, Pittsburgh Pirates catcher, said.

He hastened to explain that his experience was limited. He flattened Dizzy with one punch.

That was in 1931 in a Texas League game at Dallas. Todd, Dallas catcher, got mad when one of Diz' fireballs came too close to his head. He rushed Dean, then pitching for Houston.

"I merely walked out and gave him one punch. Down goes Dean and the war was over," Todd recalled.

Early this season Dizzy declared he would not pitch with Davis behind the plate. Later he modified the statement. Davis, however, failed to accept Dean's altered decision and told his teammates there will be blows as soon as the pitcher walks into a Cardinal dressing room.

Miller and Sarron Bout Here Likely; Money Authorized

MAJ. ERNEST W. BROWN, superintendent of police, yesterday authorized an increased budget for the annual police benefit boxing card which, it is expected, will make it possible to bring a rematch between Freddy Miller and Pete Sarron for the world's featherweight championship here this year.

Miller recently successfully defended his crown against Sarron in a furious bout that left many arguments and much dissension in its wake, and Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary to the District Boxing Commission, who acts as matchmaker for the police fight, immediately started negotiations for a rematch here. The date for the police card has been set for May 25. It will be the first outdoor bout of the season.

The increased budget was authorized so that a gate big enough to allow the annual Cherry Blossom Festival as well as the Police Boys Clubs to benefit would be possible. It is estimated that the Sarron-Miller contest will draw at least $40,000.

2,200 Watch Furr Upset Serrian

Wins Fight With Long Rights; Outfought; Verdict Booed.

By Bill McCormick.

FUTURE financial security for Phil Furr was assured at Turner's Arena last night as the District welterweight champion belted his way to a unanimous ten-round decision over Mickey Serrian, of Scranton, Pa.

Not that Furr's share of the $2,500 contributed by the capacity crowd of 2,200 was enough to assure Phillip of an old age free from financial worries. Not that beating Serrian put Furr in line for large gates at the Garden or Twentieth Century Club. But, the manner in which the patrons booed and gave the Brooklyn burp to the entirely justified decision in favor of Furr augurs well for the drawing power of Washington's premier 147-pounder. It is an old axiom of the prize ring that if they hate 'em, they'll come out to see 'em get beat—and if last night's reception of Phillip's win is any criterion, Furr is a very much hated person, indeed.

Potent Right Hand.

In almost every one of the ten rounds Furr shook Serrian to the heels with his right hand, which would have laid low any but a human Rock of Gibraltar. That was at long range.

At close quarters, another story was told as Serrian ripped both hands to the Furr midsection continually. Had all these body blows landed solidly, Mickey would have been a clear winner, but for the most part Furr managed to nullify almost completely their effect by some neat blocking, coupled with some very adroit holding. Perhaps the boys in the back rows, who did most of the squawking at the decision, did not see that 90 per cent of the time when Furr was not blocking the wallops to the brisket he was converting them into harmless pitty-pats by tying Mickey's arms into knots.

The Post scoresheet showed six rounds to Furr, two even and two to Serrian. On points, Furr was ahead 47½ to 43½ on this writer's tally. The winner weighed 145, Serrian 146.

Irish Johnny Dean, a Pete Sarronish lightweight, who makes his headquarters in Charlotte, N. C., and Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, worked six rounds to a draw in a nerve-racking semifinal.

Irish Johnny bounced his way into several clear leads which were wiped out by Pete's frequent flurries. Judges Charley Dunn and O. U. Singer balloted the affray a stalemake, nullifying Referee Constantine Placo's vote for Dean.

Al Parks, angular Baltimore middleweight, belted his way to a unanimous decision over Roy Manley, Arkansas southpaw, in a gruelling six-round preliminary. Woefully out of condition, Manley still was able to give Parks a merry session before dropping the official award in the closing rounds.

Mike Tardugno, local featherweight, scored a quick knockout over Willie Felice, of Brooklyn, in another preliminary scheduled for six rounds. Mike dropped Willie for the full count with a right to the head and the referee finished counting exactly 1 minute and 13 seconds after the contest got under way.

Sarazen and Hagen Bow in $100 Match

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 9.—Held idle by heavy rains today, contestants in the twelfth annual $4,000 international four-ball golf matches here plan to resume play tomorrow.

Two first round matches halted by yesterday's downpour will be finished early tomorrow, before the eight surviving teams start the 36-hole grind of the second round.

'36 Olympics Await Fate On Friday

League Council Session May Decide Future of Berlin Games.

British Drop Fund Plea; Little Entente Seen Ready to Quit.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

LONDON, March 9.—The British Olympic committee tonight indefinitely suspended public and private appeals for funds for the summer Olympics at Berlin.

The decision was made "to avert possible rebuffs owing to the political situation," the committe said, adding that the question of Britain abandoning the Olympics because of Germany's denunciation of the Locarno Treaty had not even been considered. Olympic entries do not close until June 15.

Berlin, March 9 (U.P.).—The fate of the world Olympic games, scheduled for this summer in Berlin, hinged tonight on the outcome of the European crisis precipitated by Germany's military re-occupation of the Rhineland.

Belief increased in Europe that Friday's League of Nations meeting at Geneva will decide indirectly the fate of the Olympics.

Preparations Continue.

Dr. Theodore Lewald, president of the Olympics organizing committee, told the United Press:

"War is the only thing that can prevent the coming Olympics. Sanctions, as such, could not. For the Olympics are neither an economic nor a political football.

"Germany believes the justice of her cause will prevent application of sanctions. However, even with sanctions, under the Olympic rules there is no question of postponing the games. Either they must be abandoned or conducted.

"German Olympic officials believe it to be in the interest of international sports to hold the games, carrying out the traditional policy of complete severance of athletics from politics.

Working Day and Night.

"Accordingly we are concentrating the coming Olympics the most successful ever contested.

"We are working day and night.

"I assure you," Lewald said, "that so far there has positively been no consideration of cancellation."

Neutral and foreign observers, however, fear that if sanctions are voted Friday European powers would withdraw their athletic teams, even if Germany should wish to hold the games.

Geneva, March 9 (U.P.).—League of Nations delegates said toight that France, Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia probably will refuse to participate in the summer Olympic games at Berlin because of Adolf Hitler's scrapping of the Versailles and Locarno treaties and reoccupation of the demilitarized Rhineland.

Offer of Reds Is Rejected By Ruth

By the Associated Press.

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 9.—Cincinnati's Reds offered Babe Ruth a chance to return to baseball, but Mrs. Ruth put her foot down and the former home run king decided today to remain in retirement.

General Manager Larry MacPhail disclosed that the Reds were prepared to have "signed him at his own terms," but that Mrs. Ruth convinced Babe his legs might not stand up under the strain of his increased weight.

Ruth, vacationing in Florida, couldn't resist the temptation to watch the Reds tangle with the Philadelphia Athletics. Visiting with MacPhail, he let drop hints that he'd like to put on a baseball suit again and to hear the applause of the crowds.

District Colleges Launch Ambitious Spring Grid Programs

250 Athletes Report for Practice

Football Drills Begin at G. U., Md. and C. U.; All Teams Are Out.

LURED outdoors by weather as balmy as a bughouse inmate, 250 athletes plunged into spring work yesterday at Georgetown, Catholic University and Maryland, while a half hundred George Washingtonians chafed at the bit, awaiting the call to colors. The small army of letter-seekers busied themselves with virtually every known sport but Dixie Dominoes—which is barred.

The spacious pasture lying to the east of Ritchie Coliseum at College Park was cluttered up with the largest group as 140 ambitious Marylanders reported for football, baseball, lacrosse, track and tennis. Forty-six men turned out for football work at Georgetown, while Coach McCarthy had another dozen batterymen out on the baseball diamond.

16 Sophomores.

Catholic University's Orange Bowl champions, augmented by the addition of some 16 prospective sophomores, pranced out on the greensward of the football stadium for an hour and half of preliminary practice.

In all instances practices were restricted to an easy pace, closely supervised by coaches who don't want their carefully prepared plans to be interrupted by strained muscles, charley horses, etc.

Jack Hagerty, Georgetown mentor, intends to spend the next few days working the Hoyas into condition, but after that business will be conducted at a faster tempo, with every man for himself. Fundamentals, followed by group work and finally team scrimmages is the program. Hagerty is well satisfied with the men, many of whom have grown bigger and stronger since last autumn, and there is an abundance of enthusiasm.

Six Embryo Stars.

A half dozen budding varsity men who may figure importantly in Georgetown plans next autumn have been singled out for harder work and more instruction. They are Jim Hill, Johnny Riofski and Tom Robertson, linemen; Frank Meglen, Elmer Moulin and Bill Valiquette, backs. Hagerty's task of rebuilding his shattered forces is as great as that of any other local coach.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman lectured his squad for an hour before sending it out on the field to practice what he preached. Every man seemed to be in excellent condition and it should not be long before they buckle down to real work.

Bergman's losses by graduation are small, numerically speaking; otherwise, of serious import. He can't exactly laugh off the absence of Ed Karpowich, George Mulligan, Bill Lajousky and Pete Dranginis, all regulars, and Hal McGann, a topnotch reserve, but with a wealth of material available he should plug the gaps in suitable fashion.

Graduation has made deep inroads at Maryland and the added uncertainty of the coaching situation isn't conducive to the 1936 team's interests. Jack Faber took a small squad through its paces yesterday and will continue at the helm until lacrosse begins in earnest when he'll switch to that sport. There isn't much for Faber to do at the moment since the majority of varsity men are trying for positions on other teams, but he could do much more than he will if he knew exactly where he stood regarding the head coaching job.

Unknown Quantity.

Burt Shipley's baseball team is an unknown quantity at the moment but probably will blossom into a top-flight collegiate club. The addition of George Woods, pitcher; Knocky Thomas, catcher; Waverly Wheeler, Karl Freas and Johnny Hurley, infielders, will add to the Terps' stock. Vic Willis, Johnny Gormley, Charlie Keller, Jack Stonebraker, Ed Daly and Al Waters are back from last season.

Give Geary Eppley a shot putter of some ability and he probably would have a grade A track team. With the exception of this weak spot, "Swede" has a nicely balanced team that includes Bill Guckeyson, Coleman Headley, Joe Ryan and Bob Slye.

The six young men in the upper photo are prospective members of Georgetown's 1936 football squad, who donned varsity livery for the first time yesterday in spring practice after a year on the freshmen team. Back row, in the usual order, Frank Meglen, Elmer Moulin, Bill Valliquette, all backs. Front row—Jim Hill, John Riofski and Tom Robertson, linemen. Old Dominion League Has 14 Clubs

THE Old Dominion 14-team league last night came under the banner of The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association. Meeting in Clarendon, Va., at the home of its president, Lawrence D. Langley, the Virginia loop also took in four new teams to expand its membership from a one 10-team league to two divisions.

Langley was re-elected president and Charles Clark, secretary-treasurer. Trophies to be awarded the championship team of each section were donated by George Horning, Washington jewler, and R. E. Knight, Alexandria jeweler.

The league decided to form one eight-team section and one six-team section. The four new clubs admitted were the Manassas Stonewalls, the Arlington Eagles, Hume Spring and Happy Valley.

The American Section.

The membership of the American section of the league will read as follows: Clarendon Business Men, Clarendon A. C., MacLean A. C., Park Lane A. C., Virginia White Sox, Clarendon Cardinals, Manassas Stonewalls and Forestville A. C. In the National section the following teams will race for the pennant, Parnell A. C., Hume Spring, Arlington Eagles, Occoquan, Franconia and Happy Valley.

The champions of each section will meet in a play-off for the Old Dominion title and right to play in The Post Association play-offs. The Old Dominion League, which was a member of the association last year, saw the Clarendon Businessmen beat out the Clarendon A. C. and the MacLean A. C. last year for the title.

The schedules will be released shortly. Opening game of the season is to be held April 16. Gold medal awards for the outstanding player of the league, the leading hitter, leading pitcher, leading base stealer and two other individual honors will be awarded.

The date will be May 2, and competing crews will be varsity, junior varsity, freshmen and 150-pound eights.

It is regarded as certain that Navy will enter the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, June 22, but the extent of the participation has not yet been determined.

The Middies will open their season April 18 with a regatta with Columbia, races being for varsity, junior varsity and freshmen, also to be rowed on the Severn. Other scheduled brushes for the Navy sweepsters: May 9, triangular race on Lake Carnegie May 16, Adams regatta for the cup offered by Charles F. Adams, former Secretary of the Navy and noted yachtsman, at Cambridge, for varsity, junior varsity and freshmen, Harvard and Penn being the other competitors; May 30, American Henley Regatta at Philadelphia (150-pound crew).

First Baseball Drill Staged at Fort Eustis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Eustis, Va., March 9.—About 60 candidates reported to Coach Mack for the first workout of the varsity baseball team here yesterday. Most of last year's veterans were on hand and quite a few new promising prospects.

The Fort Eustis nine, rated as one of the best teams in Tidewater, Virginia, would like to book games with the leading semi-pro teams in the District of Columbia. All interested clubs are requested to write to D. H. Dennison, Athletic Director, Fort Eustis, Va.

Harris' Praise on Catching Of Pop Flys Cheers Wynne

(This is another in a series of stories from the Nationals' training camp at Orlando, Fla., written by Huck Wynne, Washington sandlotter whose trial is being financed by The Washington Post.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 9.—Bucky Harris was telling me today that he was glad to see me grab those pop flies in batting practice. That made me feel pretty good, needless to say, but I felt better after Bucky went on to explain.

According to Harris, there are a lot of catchers, even big leaguers, who aren't so good at catching those pop-ups. But what interested me most was what he said about that part of the catcher's work in general.

He was telling me that a catcher either is good at snaring those pop-ups when he is in high school or on the sand lots, or he's apt never to be very clever at it at all.

It depends mostly on the catcher's natural instincts. A fellow who is not a good judge of pop-ups may improve, but he'll never be the equal of the man who never had any trouble figuring 'em out.

Harris made one important exception. In Muddy Ruel's case, he said that Ruel never was much of a hand at catching pop flies when he first came into the league with the Yankees. But Ruel practiced most of an hour every day and became one of the best.

But even when Ruel was a regular with Washington and had had a couple of great years, he continued to practice catching pop-ups every day. Luke Sewell, on the other hand, and Moe Berg, too, never did need any practice that way, according to Bucky. They had a great natural instinct at following the ball and were as good at it on the first day of training as they were in mid-season.

Things are getting more interesting here. The Yannigans play the regulars a six-inning game on Wednesday and we'll get some real action for the first time. I'm itching to get behind that bat in a ball game.

Ochsenreiter Tops County Scorers

EUGENE OCHSENREITER, Montgomery High's all-high center, was not even extended in recording his second consecutive Montgomery County individual scoring championship, the county seat star's total of 122 points in eight contests eclipsing his nearest rival, Dick Lansdale, of Sherwood, by 55 points. Ochsenreiter's average of 15.25 per game was more than 6 points higher than the Sandy Spring sharpshooter.

Ochsenreiter not only paced the county scorers, but led his team in virtually every contest. In addition, he was the individual scoring stars of the recent Sportsmanship tourney, scoring 27 points in two games.

San Francisco, March 9 (AP).—Thursday, two-time conqueror of Discovery, turned in a brilliant trial today in training for the $5,000 added San Francisco handicap, mile and a sixteenth race to be run at Tanforan this week-end.

He worked a mile in 1:39 2-5. Trainer Tommy Griffin said Thursday's move surpassed anything he showed at Santa Anita while training for the $100,000 stake in the South.

One of the best amateur bouts of the year is in prospect in the 126-pound division in which Defending Champion Lou Gevinson and Joe Tardugno, another of the clouting clan of Tardugnos, are entered. It is probable that these two featherweights will battle it out in the finals.

3 Pin Teams Tied For Federal Lead

THE race for the pennant in the Federal League was turned topsy-turvy last night at the Arcadia alleys and to Joe McCarty, of the G. P. O. (Union Printers), a sixth place aggregation, can be traced the reason. Rolling games of 158, 133 and 130 for a 419 set, third high for the season, McCarty was a big factor in his team's odd-game decision over the leading National Capital Parks quint. The Printers shot 611 for top game and 1727 for the set.

As a result of the upset, three teams are now tied for the No. 1 position, Investigation, Highway Department and National Capital Parks. Investigation and Highway climbed to the top with clean weeps over Navy Yard and Public School, respectively. I. B. E. W.'s two wins over Veterans Bureau put them next in line, followed by G. P. O., the latter humbling Interstate twice.

Bob Renfro (Cononials), and Bob Garrett (Aztecs), shared individual honors in the Procurement League last night at Recreation, chalking up a 143 game and 356 set, respectively. The Colonials took high game with 576, and total pinfall went to the Dorics with 1576. The leading Orientals were set back twice by the Modernists.

Activities in the Navy Department League last night at the Arcadia were featured by A. Phillips' (Bureau of Engineering) 146 game and 376 set. High team game was annexed by Press with 571 and Adjutants & Inspectors carried away total pinfall with 1614.

National City Loop Calls Friday Meeting

The National Capital Baseball League will reorganize for the coming season at 7 p. m. Friday at 1320 G street, second floor. President George Leek, who called the meeting, requests attendance of all managers of teams in the circuit last year. Teams wishing to enter the circuit also may have representatives present.

The ten teams which made up the loop last season are again expected to enter the pennant race. The following teams competed in the 1935 chase: Chesapeake & Potomac, Potomac Electric, Gulf Oil, Diamond Cab, Premier Cab, Chestnut Farms, Acacia Mutual, Center Market and Peoples Drug Store. Acacia won the title.

Mt. Vernon Independent Nine Will Meet Tonight

Alexandria, March 9 (Special).—The Mount Vernon Independents hold their first meeting of 1936 tomorrow to discuss plans for the coming baseball season. No More Golf at Orlando Now

Appling Must Speed Up

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Calif., March 9.—Luke Appling, the Chicago White Sox's regular shortstop, who held out against salary terms until late last week, will catch up with the rest of the squad in conditioning without delay, if Manager Jimmy Dykes has his way.

Appling reported yesterday and was immediately put to work in an exhibition game with the Seattle Club. He was sore and lame today, but Dykes ordered him out for a long session of batting, running and infield practice.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 9.—The Phillies' entire training camp, from Manager Jimmy Wilson down, is talking about the fielding of the sparkling new infield combination around second base.

With Rookie Leo Norris, from Minneapolis, at the shortstop berth, and holdover Mexican Jose Gomez on the keystone sack, the double-playing is clicking all around, and Manager Wilson is about convinced his infield midway problem is solved.

Norris has been particularly impressive, not only for his play afield, but for his work at bat in the intra-camp games. He and Woody Abernathy, the outfielder from Baltimore, stand out as the likeliest looking of the rookies.

San Antonio, Tex., March 9.—Manager Pie Traynor split his Pirates into the regulars and Yanigans today in preparation for the first training camp game Sunday.

The line-ups for the infields on both squads went through stiff drills after a snappy batting practice which saw Paul Waner cracking one of Big Jim Weaver's offerings out of the lot.

Earle Browne went on first base for the Yanigans, with Cookie Lavagetto at second, Dunk Barkley at short and Bill Brubaker holding down third. For the regulars, Gus Suhr, Pep Young, Arky Vaughan and Traynor took their regular posts

Fort Myers, Fla., March 9.—Back in their home training camp after the winless series with the Reds, the Athletics looked over their short-comings today—and found them to be considerable.

The newcomers were weak both at bat and afield.

The infield did not function as it should, principally through the holdout absence of third-baseman Pinky Higgins.

The outfielding was not as flawless as desired.

Mack will have tomorrow to iron out some of the rough spots before taking on the St. Louis Cardinals at Bradenton Wednesday.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9 (AP).—With Holdout Hal Lee sitting in the stands, the Boston Bees worked out for a half hour today and then ran into a heavy storm.

Lee explained that he was waiting for the first train out for his home in Ruston, La., where, he claimed, he could make as much money as the Bees offered him. President Bob Quinn appeared willing to let him go.

"Lee knows my terms," Quinn said, "and he can take them or leave them. If he wants to go home, that's O. K. with me. If he does, he's through with us unless he signs for a salary much less than the one I offered him. I've warned him about it and nothing is going to make me change my mind."

Fort Myers, Fla., March 9 (AP).—The fourth game of their series with the Philadelphia Athletics postponed by rain, the Cincinnati Reds left today for Tampa, Fla., where they will continue the spring training they started in Puerto Rico. The second contingent of Reds will leave San Juan by airplane Tuesday to joint the group at Tampa, where an exhibition game with the Detroit Tigers is scheduled for Thursday.

Avalon, Calif., March 9 (AP).—Manager Charlie Grimm called off today's scheduled intra-camp game because of the absence of Outfielder Frank Demaree and Third Baseman Stanley Hack, but hustled the Cubs through a vigorous general drill.

Horton SmithTalks In Capital April 17

Horton Smith, famous Chicago professional, who has a habit of winning the richest purse of the year in golf—to wit: the Miami-Biltmore—will speak at the annual meeting of the District of Columbia Scholastic Golf Association April 17.

Such was the announcement last night from Frank Emmet, association director, who returned from New York, where he attended the annual meeting of the Eastern Interscholastic Golf Association at the Princeton Club.

The schoolboy meeting will be held either at the Willard or Washington Hotel, and will take the form of a large rally in the interest of junior and prep school golf.

Emmet stated that Georgetown Prep would participate in the Eastern tournament at Greenwich, Conn., June 23-26. Billy Dettweiler, of G. P., won the medal last year with a 147.

Georgetown Prep will play May Hill School, of Pottstown, Pa., in Washington, early in May, Emmet stated.

Course in Good Shape, Kenwood Opens Today

Kenwood Golf and Country Club's course will be opened today, with temporary greens to be used for at least a week. Al Jamieson, pro, stated yesterday. Workmen spent many an hour yesterday rolling the course and declared it is in good shape.

Nightcap Wins, Hialeah Meeting Ends

Charity Day Is Observed At Track

Abbott's Horse Returns $14.50; Nick Wall Rides Triple.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 9. The Miami Jockey Club's successful 46-day meeting wound up here today with a charity program. Everyone was charitable, except the weather man, who poured torrential rains over Miami yesterday and overnight, while threatening clouds lingered during the afternoon.

Eight appropriately named events were decided over a track deep in mud and slop. The Hibicus Purse, a 1-mile event, fourth on the card, attracted the best field.

A. W. Abbott's Nightcap made the sterling time of 1:37 3-5 to win by a length. Rushaway, recently purchased at private terms from J. E. Widener by A. G. Tarn, leading local trainer, was second in the role of favorite. He had six lengths to spare over Willard Wilson's Lancewood. Nightcap paid $14.50 for $2.

Contributing to the charity fund were employes, horsemen, mutuels percentages and entire gate receipts. Well-known sportswomen acted as "sponsors" for each of the eight races, posing with President Widener and the winning rider and then prsenting the lucky pilot a bouquet about as big as the jockey himself. Nationally known entertainers from night clubs and other professional fields did their stuff over the "mikes" on a specially constructed platform in the center of the lawn. Complimentary passes were not honored.

Gov. Dave Sholtz and party occupied a front box.

Johnny Longden, assured of the gold watch awaiting the leading local jockey at the end of the session, broke Rushaway in a manner the gelding's name would imply. The former Widenerite drew into a long advantage, with Nightcap after him on the muddy trail.

Nightcap Draws Up.

Nick Wall urged the ultimate winner up closer after turning for home. Nightcap finally drew up on the outside and passed Rushaway to score going away.

After this event, President Widener of the Miami Jockey Club was introduced to the crowd from the platform. The international sportsman spoke to the crowd, thanking them for helping the cause and acknowledged appreciation to all who aided the fund. He stated that "everything taken in" would go to charity, and was roundly cheered.

Awards to the leading trainer, jockey and apprentice rider for the 46-day meeting saw Canadians monopolizing the honors. To A. G. Tarn, Winnipeg horseman, went the $500 prize offered to the leading trainer for the third and final leg of competition. Johnny Longden, of Calgary, who rides for Tarn, received a gold watch for topping the jockey at the meeting, Ira Hanford, of the Hanford riding family from Omaha, Nebr., earned a similar gift from President J. E. Widener for showing the way to the apprentice division.

PAPENIE, displaying partial ability in the footing, moved into a winning lead during the opening furlong, went along strongly and increased his lead at will. BETTY BYRNE followed in closest attendance of the winner after the opening six lengths and was easily best of the others. MOLASSES BOB swerved out soon after the start, settled in his stride and finished gamely. SEALINE was outrun and could not threaten when put to severe pressure.

COL. GREENE, suited by the footing and going in his best form, displaced MISS RAINBOW without effort to open up a clear lead, but tired suddenly and had to be shaken up vigorously to last long enough. MISS RAINBOW was overtaken midway of the final turn, rallied when reaching the home stretch and, coming again, was wearing the winner down rapidly at the close. MARTIN BARTON was under strong urging throughout, but could not menace.

MISS PURRAY, close to the leaders in the early running, took command when reaching the home stretch, was kept under urging and drew out steadily approaching the finish. CREOLE BIRD, forced out from the first half mile, circled her field to enter contention, but could not threaten the winner. ZEVANAID showed nice speed while saving ground, but weakened fast after being overtaken.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (chute); allowances. Roddey Burdine Memorial. Purse, $13,00. (First division). For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3.57. Off at 4:01½. Start good. Won driving; place same. NIGHTCAP, at home in the going, engaged the pacemaker when reaching the home stretch, swung to the outside and, closing fast under a hard drive, was up in the last sixteenth. RUSHAWAY sprinted into a clear lead, showed good ability in the footing, saved ground and held on tenaciously when challenged. LANCEWOOD was hard ridden all the way, swung wide at the stretch turn, but was easily best of the others.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $800. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:26. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. William E. RACE CRAFT, placed to punishment when the start came, followed in close pursuit of THATCHESTA until midway of the back stretch, gained command under strong pressure and drew out smartly when shaken up in the last five-sixteenths. NIGHT RAY worked his way up gradually when settled in full stride, closed gamely and outfinished GALLIC approaching the finish. GALLIC raced on the outside of the leaders, saved much ground in the last half mile and finished gamely.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; allowances. Roddey Burdine Memorial. Purse, $1,000. (Second division.) For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:52. Off at once. Start good and fast. Won easily; place driving. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE HARE, $11.10, $4.10, out; MISS BAM, $3.10, out; PLAY CHANCE, out.

THE HARE, showing a keen fondness for the footing, sprinted into an easy lead, rallied nicely after being given a breathing spell midway of the final turn and drew out into a long lead at the close. MISS BAM obtained racing room on the inside of BRILLIANT LIGHT, offered a weak challenge in the last half mile, then was held safe. PLAY CHANCE, slow to settle in his stride, saved ground when bettering his position and finished stoutly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $800. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:21½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Joseph L. Barnes. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:53. (Weather, raining.)

HADTOBE, reserved back of the leaders for the first 6 furlongs, gained stoutly when placed to pressure, came through a wide opening when the leaders went out at the stretch turn, then held on tenaciously after getting to the front during the closing furlong. LONE HAND, raced lapped with HIGHEST POINT until reaching the home stretch, carried the latter wide, but continued strongly until the finish. HIGHEST POINT moved into a short lead midway of the back stretch, rallied nicely when placed to it in a strong drive, but was carried out at the stretch turn and weakened thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:48. Winner, Ballard and Shannon's br. g. (3); by Chance Shot or Haste—Laughing Eyes II. Trained by J. W. Smith. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40 4-5.

Tropical Park, March 9.

Dear Al:

The last phase of the Florida winter racing season begins here today. Tropical is about the same distance as Hialeah from downtown Miami, being about 10 miles to the southwest, whereas Hialeah is to the northwest. Tropical's landscape has been improved a lot, but it is doubtful whether it ever will be a match for the Widener track. However, Tropical is a popular course, holding somewhat the same position hereabouts as Bowie does in Maryland. Tropical has a homey atmosphere that one cannot seem to catch at Hialeah. Then, too, the officials are generous with passes. Bill Dwyer, the man behind the guns here, is perhaps the best liked official connected with Florida racing. He is as easy to see at the track as Jockey Noboy Jacobs. Tropical will not have a shortage of horses. Every stall is filled and many horses will be vanned over from Hialeah on the day that they run. Tropical conflicts with Bowie for four days and the consensus here is that the Maryland track will not have many Florida horses available for the first week's racing, which opens on April 1.

BILL.

First race — Miss Subway seems well suited by conditions here and I see no reason for mistakes. Jackful and Pretty Busy to take care of the others.

Second race — Pompeius, providing the track remains off, will have a lot to say about the purse distribution here. This one carries a load in that 117-pound assignment, but his chief rivals are well weighted. Lord Tournament appears to be headed for the place award. Mucho Gusto is a possible surprise.

Third race — The Gerry-Steward Entry of Butter Milk and Fortuity seems to hold a strong hand in the day's juvenile test. Savage Beauty and Grey Fluff have worked well and should be in the thick of the contention.

Fourth race—I'm going to give Speed another chance. It was over a track of about a similar condition that this fellow cake-walked to a victory earlier in the winter. If he gets off alertly here, he may open a wide gap and last to take the main award. Greek Idol has a fighting chance. Ceiling for the show.

Fifth race—Bright Haven, Quel Jeu and Ladfield, the three heavyweights of this field, seem destined to battle it out for this purse. I prefer them in the order named. Clocker Mike likes Polish Beau.

Seventh race—Thruster gets in with a steadying 108 pounds and deserves the call in this company. El Puma and the heavily imposted Crowned Head for the other money places.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Work Lower in Moderate Trading; Dollar Higher on War Alarms.

New York, March 9.—Dollars profited from the war threats in Europe and the Far East, but while other markets took the matter calmly, prices were under pressure most of the day. If the higher quotation for the dollar meant the actual shift of frightened funds to this country, the effect on our securities was well offset by domestic sales as a precaution against the great upset to trade and commerce that a war would bring. Stock prices closed in a sales rush on a turnover of 2,500,000 shares. Government bonds declined. May wheat lost seven-eighths of a cent at 99 cents a bushel.

Militant demonstrations in Germany continued to influence stock prices, and perhaps the weakness in high-grade bonds came partly from that source. However, it was to be expected that the recent enthusiasm of the Government bond market for the new issues would be followed by a let-up in buying. Some subscribers doubtless have been taking profits on old issues they held and on new ones they obtained.

While recognizing the seriousness of the situation in Europe, Wall Street feels that the steps now being taken by Germany merely follow many others and will be followed by many more in that country's progress toward a challenge to Europe for its old position of central dominance. The markets were less concerned with the question of ultimate conflict than with the time when it likely would begin. No peace protestations nor temporary settlements will entirely remove the nervousness felt, but optimism is now sufficiently strong to support the wishful thinking that no armed struggle will take place immediately.

Outbreak of war undoubtedly would be a bear point on the stock market, but it scarcely would be the calamity it was in 1914, when the Stock Exchange had to be closed to slacken the heavy dumping of European owned securities. Foreign investment now is much less than it was then. Just the same a good deal of foreign capital has gone into our markets in recent months, and it might be mobilized at home in case of war. Moreover, without neutrality stand, actual fighting would tend to cut down our export trade. War orders scarcely could make up for the damage to trade in general, and even war orders would be difficult to fill. In any event they could apply only to commodities regarded as accessories, such as cotton, copper, motors, oil and the like, which might be routed through other neutral countries.

In short, the only war babies our markets are likely to see this time will be those born before the actual fighting begins. Some of them—coppers, oils, airplanes and motors—are in the making now.

Since repatriation of foreign funds in case of war might not amount to anything like what it was more than 20 years ago, when sterling went to a premium, the effects of war naturally would be to lift the dollar quotation in terms of currencies in the affected areas. Sterling is managed. German currency is of unknown value already, and the French franc is being constantly shaken on its gold foundation by the economic forces playing around it. It certainly could not stand up under a war. Foreign exchanges today again were weak, but they were a shade better than on Saturday. Trading began with a bad break in European rates, followed by nervousness and then a rally which restored about half the early loss.

Steel Carries Expansion Into Present Year

Some Companies Report Largest Earnings Since 1929.

After recording the largest output since 1930 and achieving the best earnings position that some of the units had attained since 1929, Dun & Bradstreet say today, the rapid improvement that developed in the iron and steel trade during the third and fourth quarters of 1935 has been carried over into the current year. Even though the automotive division was largely absent as a buyer during the last of January and most of February, because of curtailed sales due to adverse weather conditions, a rate of activity has been maintained above that of 1935, with the exception of two weeks.

The five-year production peak was established in 1935 in spite of the reduced steel capacity. The latter dropped to 69,789,543 gross tons annually for pig iron and steel ingots on December 31, 1935, from 70,046,366 a year earlier.

Certain Death Of Hauptmann In April Seen

Talk of Reprieve Subsides; Hoffman Power of Stay Ends Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 9.—Talk of a reprieve for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, at a high level a week ago, subsided so rapidly today that even the prosecution was inclined to believe Hauptmann would die in the electric chair early in April.

A high prosecution official who said last week there was "every indication" of a new reprieve swung to the other viewpoint today and said he did not think the convicted Lindbergh baby killer would escape the chair again.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, who stayed Hauptmann's execution on January 16, 29 hours before he was to go to the chair, by his own statement has no power to sign a second reprieve after March 12 and said last week "as matters stand now" there will not be a second reprieve.

Power of Governor.

"The Governor," says the Constitution, "* * * shall have power * * * to grant reprieves to extend until the expiration of a time not exceeding 90 days after conviction * * *"

"Conviction" in this instance the Governor said, means last December when Hauptmann lost his appeal in the United States Supreme Court, and a new date was set for execution.

Despite this, the Governor's investigation of the Lindbergh crime, which he believes has never been completely solved, was continued today.

Assembly Vote Due.

The State Assembly may vote tonight upon the resolution of Basil Bruno, Monmouth Republican, urging investigation of the motor vehicle department. Bruno charges the Governor has turned it into "a detective agency" in his Lindbergh case investigation.

The bill to keep Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, in office until a successor is named and confirmed by the Senate, is also before the Assembly. It was learned from a reliable source that its sponsor, Henry Young, jr., of Essex, has enough votes for passage, but may not move it for a vote tonight. Last week the measure was sidetracked when Young found he lacked the necessary votes.

Three Democratic assemblymen from Middlesex and one in Hunterdon, home counties of Attorney General David T. Wilentz and Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., respectively, were reported ready to support the measure.

"Can't Return," Says Jafsie.

New York, March 9 (AP).—Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, intermediary in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, was quoted by a ship cruise conductor today as saying that he "could not return home" from Cristobal, Canal Zone, "because 'they' won't let me."

Richard B. Townsend, cruise conductor of the Colombian liner Colombia, returning here from a southern trip, recounted in detail a conversation which he said he had with Dr. Condon when the boat docked at Cristobal.

"I pressed him for an explanation of who 'they' were, but he wouldn't say, and he wouldn't say why he couldn't come back," Townsend said.

Townsend said that Dr. Condon appeared worried and in bad health.

"Sitting in the hotel, Dr. Condon said, 'They keep bothering me,' Townsend asserted. "They send me letters and cables. The other day they sent me a wire that my wife was ill and the next day they sent me one that my wife was dead.'"

Grandson of Wilson To Study for Ministry

North Adams, Mass., March 9 (AP). Francis B. Sayre, jr., son of the Assistant Secretary of State, and grandson of former President Woodrow Wilson, plans to study for the ministry when he graduates from Williams College this year. The youth announced his plans in an address here yesterday in which he deplored the absence of moral codes in society.

From what he has observed, he asserted, "those things which interest the student are problems of learning to get along with fellowmen and become distinguished among them; problems of how to succeed in business, how to get a wife, and so on; he is, in general, little concerned with the problem which every one of us must face at one time or another—of whether God exists or not."

C. de B. Claiborne, 58, Lousiana Banker, Dies

New Orleans, March 9 (AP).—Charles deB. Claiborne, 58, vice president of the Whitney National Bank and prominent in the social and financial life of New Orleans, died today after an operation at Touro Infirmary.

Mr. Claiborne was a direct descendant of W. C. C. Claiborne, appointed the first American Governor of Louisiana by President Thomas Jefferson.

Policeman Burned Saving Baby; Mother, 26, Hurt in Blaze Here

Pvt. Adams Rescues Nephew When Exploding Stove Causes Fire in Northeast Home; Mrs. Moore Suffers Leg Fracture in Jump.

A policeman was burned seriously saving his nephew from death, and a 26-year-old mother suffered a fracture of the leg in a fire yesterday in their home at 116 U street northeast.

Private James Walter Adams, 29, attached to the Traffic Division, suffered third degree burns on his hands, face and body when he dashed into the house to rescue Robert Moore, 5-month-old son of the injured woman. Adams was admitted to Sibley Hospital for treatment. His condition is serious.

Mrs. Mary Moore, 26, Adams' sister-in-law, was treated as Sibley for a fracture of the right leg. She leaped from a second-floor rear winow, after a stove had exploded in the kitchen.

The policeman was cleaning the stove when it blew up. Flames quickly spread through the kitchen and adjoining room, and Adams ran to the back yard. Mrs. Moore leaped from the window and screamed to her brother-in-law.

"Save the baby! He's upstairs."

Adams ran back into the house, through the blazing kitchen to the second floor, and clutching Robert in his arms made his way to the street.

Mrs. Margaret Adams, wife of the policeman, and Mrs. Mary Brant, mother of Mrs. Moore, were also in the house when the explosion occurred, but escaped uninjured.

Firemen confined the blaze to the two rooms. Damage was estimated at $500.

Warrant for Senator Duffy

Prophet reputedly ticketed the car. He said:

"I always park my car in the Senate garage while at the Capitol and in my own garage when at home."

Policeman's Story.

A short time later, the reporter went to Prophet's home. The policeman was awakened. He exhibited records showing when and where the ticket was issued.

"The tag numbers were listed to F. Ryan Duffy," he said. "I doubt if it would make any difference to me whether the car owner was a Senator or not. The auto was parked in violation of the law and I put a ticket on it. At the time, I didn't know to whom it belonged."

The warrant was obtained in routine duty, Prophet said. He issued the ticket in February, waited a reasonable length of time and when the violator took no action, the warrant was applied for.

Warrant in Pile of Cases.

Senator Duffy indicated he would do nothing about the warrant until "the circumstances were fully investigated."

"I have never had a ticket of any kind," he said. "And I have not seen this one. So there is nothing I can do."

It was Senator Duffy who questioned Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, during the latter's recent Senate address on "Congressional immunity" and "special privileges" in law infractions.

Senator Borah was discussing parking law violations by members of Congress and citing recent stories in The Washington Post when interrupted by Duffy.

Debate With Borah.

Mr. Borah—There is no exemption, there is no privilege, there is no immunity in regard to those things and I think as soon as that is understood by the public the better it will be for all concerned because the impression prevails that such immunity does exist and that we take advantage of it to the disadvantage of the private citizen. I do not know of any instances in which members of Congress have actually taken or assumed to take advantage, but it ought to be understood that they cannot do so if the officers desire to enforce the law.

Mr. Duffy—Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. Borah—I yield.

Mr. Duffy—I did not have the benefit of all the Senator's discussion, but does the Senator contend that a violation of a city ordinance which is not a crime or a felony is considered a breach of the peace under the three terms that are used in the Constitution?

Mr. Borah—I think the violation of any rule or regulation which would be considered as a fine if violated by a private citizen would be a fine if violated by a member of Congress.

Mr. Duffy—That is true, but the constitutional terms being "crime, felony and breach of the peace" except in those three cases, I did not understand that a statute passed by a municipality would come under any of those categories.

Mr. Borah—I think so. I have no doubt about it.

Oklahoma City, March 9 (AP).—Sterilization of 25 women and four men inmates of the Western Oklahoma Hospital at Supply has been ordered by the board of affairs, Chairman L. M. Nichols announced today.

Leigh Drops Suit Against Magazine

Howard Leroy, counsel for Randolph Leigh, of Fairfax, Va., said last night Lehigh had withdrawn his suit against Collier's magazine for alleged libel in an article by George Creel. Leroy said he could give no reason for the action except "Mr. Leigh's wishes."

Leigh, candidate for the Senate seat now occupied by Senator Carter Glass, filed suit in the District of Columbia Supreme Court for $200,000, charging he was libeled in a political article in the magazine.

Lift Strikers Assail 2 Roosevelt Friends

New York, March 9 (AP).—Two friends of President Roosevelt were assailed as unfair by the striking building service workers today. Before 200 Madison avenue, of which Jesse H. Jones is a trustee, a picket bore a placard reading: "Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is unfair to organized labor. This is his building."

At 330 Fifth avenue a picket's placard said: "Vincent Astor is unfair to organized labor. This is his building."

Cape Town-to-England Flight Record Broken

London, March 9 (AP).—British Flying Officer Tommy Rose beat the Cape Town-to-England record today by 5 hours and 12 minutes. He landed at Croydon Airdrome at 11:05 a. m. (6:05 a. m., E. S. T.) after leaving Cape Town, South Africa, at 4 a. m., March 3, for an elapsed time of 6 days, 7 hours 5 minutes.

He also set a record for a two-way flight, having beaten Mrs. Amy Johnson-Mollison's outward record by 13 hours and 16 minutes.
